Doctor Dies

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, 60, famous country doctor who brought the Dionne quintuplets into the world, died in a North Bay, Ont., hospital today.

Of Pneumonia

Dr. A. R. Dafoe, Quints' Doctor, Dies Suddenly

NORTH BAY, Ont., June 2.—(CP)—Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe of nearby Callander died in hospital today nine years after he had gained international prominence by officiating at the birth of the Dionne quintuplets. He was 60 years old.

Dr. D. A. Campbell of North Bay, who attended Dr. Dafoe, said death was due to pneumonia. He added that Dr. Dafoe was brought here by ambulance from Callander this morning and died about 11 a.m., just a few minutes after being admitted to hospital.

Dr. Dafoe, who had been in poor health for several months, returned to his home Tuesday from a visit to Toronto and became acutely ill this morning.

LOVED IN DISTRICT

Known familiarly as the "Little Doc," Dr. Dafoe was loved and respected throughout the Callander district for his kindliness and never-failing willingness to answer calls for medical assistance no matter what discomfort it might cause him.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed, pending the arrival from Toronto of Dr. Dafoe's brother, Dr. William A. Dafoe.

CALLANDER, Ont., June 2.—(CP)—The Dionne quintuplets were deeply moved today when they were told of the death of Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, who had officiated at their births and who had been their physician for eight years.

"We will ask God to take care of his soul," said Emilie.

"Yes, we will pray for him," said Yvonne, and the other sisters echoed that promise.

Add to Destruction Caused by Allied Planes

British Warships Bombard Island of Pantelleria

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, June 2—British warships have bombarded the Italian stepping stone island of Pantelleria twice in 48 hours, adding to the destruction wrought by Allied planes in virtually continuous raids, a communique announced today.

Naval surface forces poured shells into the harbor area without effective opposition Sunday night, then returned late yesterday afternoon and shelled the barracks and battery areas, scoring hits.

(Reports from France received in Madrid stated that Italy's Pantelleria island had been virtually isolated by constant Allied air bombardment which was said to have cut off naval traffic and to have made air communication extremely difficult. It was reported that even submarines had stopped visiting the island.)

(An Italian communique broadcast by the Rome radio said one destroyer of the naval formation which shelled Pantelleria yesterday was damaged heavily, but acknowledged that air raids have caused severe damage to buildings on the island. The communique also reported that Allied planes bombed the Naples area and localities in Sicily and Sardinia.)

There was some retaliation from

Bracken Says

Edmonton Is Busiest City In Dominion

By B. T. RICHARDSON
Edmonton Bulletin Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA, June 2.—The fabulous northwest of Canada, where the war has touched with a magic wand of rapid development, has a new, enthusiastic convert in John Bracken, national Progressive Conservative leader, who told the press today about his recent trans-continental tour, and his flight from Edmonton to the Yukon Territory. He reported wonderful receptions wherever he had gone. "If I told you what I found out, you would think I was only talking propaganda."

On political subjects, Mr. Bracken made the following observations:

1—He will not soon seek election to parliament. He said "when I have any such plan I will announce it."

2—He will not campaign in the coming Ontario election. He said "I do not intende to take part in any of the provincial elections."

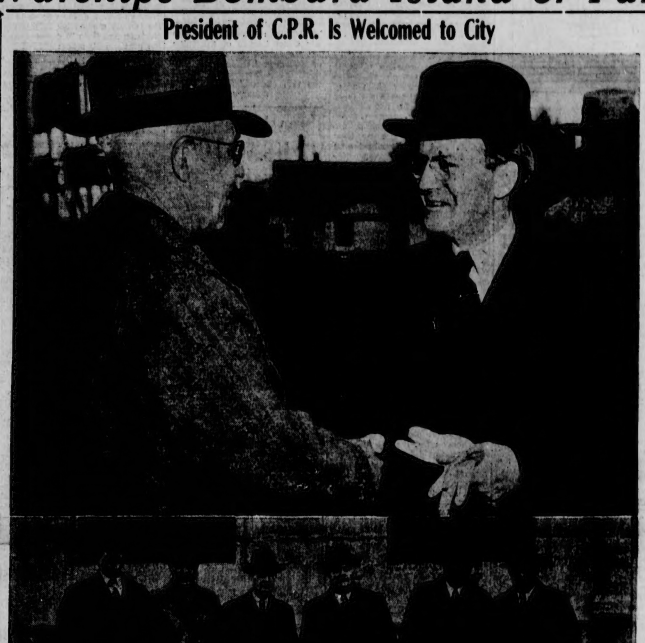

3—As a westerner he would rather not see the west lose seats in the coming federal redistribution.

4—He knows the new premier of Alberta, Hon. E. C. Manning, of whom he said Manning has youth. He said "He is a good citizen, and he is highly regarded."

His trip had made him proud to be a Canadian. Busiest city in Can-

Hooke Resigns Post Chairman Of S.C. Board

Hon. Alfred J. Hooke, provincial secretary, resigned Wednesday morning from the chairmanship of the Alberta Social Credit Board, a post he has held for the last three years. Mr. Hooke was appointed Tuesday to Premier Ernest Manning's nine-man cabinet.

Mr. Hooke's vacancy on the board will not be filled, it was learned, and a new chairman will be elected from among the remaining members of the board in the next day or two.

The four members now on the board are A. V. Bourcier, M.L.A. for Lac Ste. Anne; Earl C. Ansley, M.L.A. for Leduc, deputy chairman; N. B. James, M.L.A., Edmonton, and F. M. Baker, M.L.A., Clover Bar. Mr. Baker, for the last two months, has been a part-time member of the board only, as he has taken over other duties.

GREAT HONOR

Mr. Hooke issued this statement Wednesday, following the announcement of his appointment to the cabinet:

"I feel that a great honor has been conferred upon me personally and upon my constituency.

"The appointment came as a surprise to me and I certainly believe there are many other men in our group just as capable as myself to carry out cabinet responsibilities.

"First and foremo:; I shall view my duties as a direct responsibility I owe to the people of Alberta. I intend to carry them out to the best of my ability at all times.

"I regret that it becomes necessary for me to discontinue my work with the Social Credit Board as my heart is in that work, believing as I do that there is no short cut to economic security together with individual freedom, but through the lines of Social Credit."

Negotiations Are Ordered To Be Halted

By RAYMOND LAHR
Exclusive to The Edmonton Bulletin

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The U.S. War Labor Board today ordered immediate cessation of negotiations between coal mine operators and the United Mine Workers, and referred the two-day old strike of 530,000 miners to President Roosevelt for action.

The board acted on the grounds that the new mine walkout violated labor's no-strike pledge. In telegrams to U.M.W. President John L. Lewis and spokesmen for the operators it said it would not recognize any agreement reached while a strike was in progress.

The miners stayed away from the pits again today in the face of a telegram from Coal Administrator Harold L. Ickes, who reminded them that they were striking against the government and that "without coal in adequate quantities we cannot win the war." Ickes is operating the mines for the government.

ANSWER TO OPERATORS

The board's telegram was regarded as an answer to a request made by the operators last night that the board intervene in the case again. The operators made the request after they had rejected a union proposal, based on a formula suggested by Ickes, for temporary settlement of the dispute.

There was no immediate indication what Mr. Roosevelt might do. It was recalled that when he took over the American coal mines several weeks ago and gave Ickes authority to operate them, he also authorized the administrator to call on the army to supply troops if they were needed to maintain order at any of the mines.

Davies Is Forced To Change Routes

SEATTLE, Wash., June 2—(AP)—Back from his special mission to Moscow, former ambassador Joseph E. Davies prepared today to report directly to President Roosevelt.

Davies, who carried a personal message from the President to Premier Stalin, arrived in Seattle yesterday after a flight that carried him almost around the world.

The announcement authorized by the special envoy said he and his party left Moscow Saturday and arrived in Alaska Monday. The big four-engined transport flew into Seattle, instead of through Edmonton, Alta., as had been planned, because of weather conditions along the latter route.

Five Edmonton men received military recognition, while two city civilians were mentioned in the list.

Edmontonians included in the list are: Colonel L. V. Janes, O.B.E.; Maj. Agnes Jean Macleod, R.R.C.; ASO. Elizabeth R. Farquharson, R.R.C.; WO) J. H. Blundell, M.S.E.; Sgt. E. V. R. Edmonton's Position as Gateway to North Assured Declares Canadian Pacific Chief

Canada is going to develop northward and Edmonton is to enjoy a strategic position in development of air routes, not only into the northern hinterland, but for overseas travel, D. C. Coleman, Montreal, president and chairman of the board of the Canadian Pacific Railway, stated on his arrival here Tuesday evening in the course of a tour of western Canada.

He said that even before the Alaska highway was constructed Edmonton held an assured place as the gateway to, and the distributing centre for a huge and rich area of the north. Now the city's position as a commercial and transportation centre is vastly enhanced.

Other developments in connection with the war, in addition to the Alaska highway, of course, are contributing to Edmonton's importance at this time, the C.P.R. president stated, and no doubt the construction projects now under way will open up territory which will be valuable feeders in the post war era.

By FRANK FLAHERTY

OTTAWA, June 2.—(CP)—Honors and decorations for 625 persons, service and civilian, were announced last night in the King's birthday honors list for Canada.

British Airliner Is Believed Downed By Nazi Planes

LONDON, June 2—(CP)—A spokesman for British Overseas Airways said today that a British passenger airliner "disappeared" yesterday on route to Britain from Lisbon, and reports from the Portugues capital said the actor, Leslie Howard, was among the 13 passengers.

A Lisbon dispatch reported that the last word heard from the plane was "enemy plane attacking us."

Kenneth Stonehouse, former chief of bureau at Washington for Reuters News Agency, who was en route to London to take a new assignment, was said to be aboard the aircraft with Mrs. Stonehouse.

RESCUE UNLIKELY

The reports from Lisbon said the plane with its Netherlands crew was shot down in the stormy Bay of Biscay about half way between Lisbon and Britain and that concern was felt over weather reports which indicated it would have been difficult for the passengers to take to their rubber boats.

The German communique reported that Nazi reconnaissance planes had shot down three Allied bombers and "one transport" over the Atlantic.

CHILDREN ON BOARD

The overseas airways spokesman said the plane was carrying 13 passengers and that one of them was named Howard. He added, however, that only the surnames of the passengers were available in London, at present.

Later the Press Association quoted reliable sources as confirming that the actor was one of the passengers on the plane.

The Lisbon account said Alfred Chaenwall, a film director, and three women, each accompanied by a child, also were passengers.

The spokesman said the fate of the plane was not known but that "enemy action" was suspected.

Anthracite Coal Stocks "Frozen"

OTTAWA, June 2.—(CP)—The Munitions Department announced last night that coal controller J. McG. Stewart has issued an order freezing all stocks of anthracite coal in Canada and all stocks of bituminous coal in Ontario and Quebec.

The order, which provides regulations to assure equitable delivery of available stocks to meet essential requirements, does not in any way affect the delivery of Canadian coal in the maritime provinces or in western Canada.

Extend F.D.R. Power to Make Trade Treaties

WASHINGTON, June 2—(AP)—The senate completed legislative action today on a measure extending for two more years, without change, the president's authority to make reciprocal trade agreements with other countries.

The legislation, passed by a vote of 52 to 23, which now goes to the White House for President Roosevelt's approval, contains executive authority to adjust tariffs downward or upward 50 per cent in return for reciprocal action by the country with which an agreement is made.

Under the "most favored nation" clause similar advantages are extended to countries which do not discriminate against American products. (Canada is among the countries which have this trade agreement with the United States.)

Earlier today, the senate defeated 44-to-32 a proposal to amend the reciprocal legislation to provide for senate ratification of trade agreements.

Respect Laws Of Humanity Is Plea of Pope

NEW YORK, June 2—(AP)—The Rome radio quoted Pope Pius XII in an address to the College of Cardinals on his Name Day today as exhorting the belligerents to respect the laws of humanity in the air war.

"We, who since the beginning of the conflict have done all that was in our power to reduce the belligerents to respect the laws of humanity in the serial war, now believe it to be our duty to exhort them once more to observe these laws," the radio quoted him as saying.

SUFFERERS IN GENERAL

In speaking of war sufferers in general, the Pontiff said, according to the Rome radio account:

"Every word addressed by us to the competent authorities and every allusion made by us in public should be seriously considered in the interest of the victims so as not to render their situation—even unintentionally—more serious and more insupportable."

In his discourse leading up to the exhortation for observance of the laws of humanity in the air war, the Pope was quoted as saying:

"It is painful and deplorable to see that often during this war one sees a moral judgment rendered on certain actions which are in discord with right and with the laws of humanity simply because the one responsible belongs to one or the other of the parties in conflict, without taking account as to whether these actions are or are not in conformity with the dictates of the Eternal Judge.

HOPES FOR NEW WORLD

"On the other hand, the progressive applications of the means of strife which make no distinction between military and non-military objectives and the ever-increasing violence of war, draw attention to the dangers inherent in the sad and inexorable relation between action and reprisals to the detriment not only of peoples and individuals but of the whole community of nations."

The holy father concluded his discourse, the broadcast said, by expressing the hope that there would be a new world in which all nations, cured of the wounds opened by violence, would advance in perfect harmony on the road toward better things.

Taxing Powers Of Provinces Said Inadequate

OTTAWA, June 2. — (CP) — Premier Stuart Gerson of Manitoba, in a brief submitted today to the House of Commons reconstruction and re-establishment committee, stressed what he called the "utter inadequacy" of provincial taxing powers to support the share of the post-war social security program "which is the province' constitutional responsibility."

He said it would be necessary either to increase the provinces' financial resources by federal adjustment grants or to transfer from the provinces to the Dominion a large part of the provincial share of the program.

In the 27-page brief presented on behalf of the province of Manitoba, Premier Garson contended that "the methods by which all of the provinces of Canada are to be enabled to pay for the share of Canada's post-war program which our constitution says shall be discharged by them, and by them alone, should be determined after a most careful consideration of the whole question of Dominion-provincial relations."

PROBLEMS SIMILAR

He said Manitoba's post-war problems were the same as anywhere else in Canada—to provide employment for those who can work and to provide adequate social security for those who are unable to obtain for themselves a minimum standard of subsistence and medical care.

"It is only by reaching full employment that the national income can be maintained at a sufficiently high level to secure the standard of human welfare which is our aim and to support social security on a broad scale visualized in the Beveridge and Marsh reports," he said.

Only a national program, not uniform, uncoordinated provincial programs, could solve the post-war problems of employment and social security, Premier Garson said, and an important part to play in reconstruction but the magnitude of the task would be such that governments would be under a clear responsibility to eradicate any residual unemployment and to provide social security.

1,500 Japs Killed In Attu Fighting

By LYLE C. WILSON
Exclusive to The Edmonton Bulletin
Copyright, 1943, by British United Press

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The United States navy announced today that American troops on Attu have killed at least 1,500 Japanese soldiers but have taken only four prisoners.

The count, it was explained, covered only the known enemy casualties as of last Sunday midnight. The final check is expected to show enemy casualties considerably higher. There was no mention of any wounded.

U.S. Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson told a press conference last Thursday that incomplete reports at that time showed American casualties on Attu to include 127 killed, 309 wounded and 118 missing.

Thus, the first estimate of enemy losses accounts for half the number of the garrison the Japanese claimed to have on the island. Earlier, an Axis broadcast quoting Japanese sources, reported that the entire enemy garrison of 2,000 had given up their lives.

George Desjarlais and his brother Samuel Baptiste Desjarlais, arrested Friday last in connection with the murder of Karl Hemmingsen, 55-year-old trapper, near Winnifred Lake, were being brought to Edmonton Wednesday afternoon, R.C.M.P. officials here stated. The two men were to have arrived at the week-end, but they were held at Lac la Biche while further investigations were being made at the scene of the crime, about 25 miles northeast of Conklin. The body of the trapper was found May 24 by an Indian four months after the former had last been seen.

Three Jap Attacks On U.S. West Coast

WASHINGTON, June 2—(AP)—Reports on three isolated Japanese attacks on the United States west coast—two reputedly by planes operating from submarines and one by submarine shelling of an Oregon forest—were disclosed yesterday by the navy.

Lyle F. Watts, chief of the forest service, told the committee at a recent executive session that what was believed to have been a bomb dropped by a Japanese plane started a small fire in southern Oregon which was quickly extinguished.

His testimony followed an assertion by Senator Rufus C. Holman (R.-Ore.), that "two different airplanes" had flown over the Coos County area of Oregon and "in Curry County they dropped an incendiary bomb, which did not function." Both counties are in southern Oregon. The date of the alleged attack was not disclosed.

STAR GAUGING

By CLINTON B. CONGER

LONDON, June 2.—First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander announced in Commons today that more German submarines were destroyed during May than in any previous month during the whole war.

The month's toll probably exceeded German U-boat construction for May, he said.

Reliable sources here estimated present German production at 14 submarines a month compared with a peak of 20 a month some time ago.

Attesting the mounting success of new Allied defence measures, Alexander said the number of U-boats destroyed during the last 12 months exceeded the total of the entire previous period of the war while in the last six months the rate of destruction had risen 25 per cent over the previous six-month period.

MANY DAMAGED

Large numbers of submarines were damaged, he said, and in the last two months the U-boats appeared to have decreased in the Atlantic.

The decrease, he said, undoubtedly was due to more than one cause but primarily was due to the rising rate of "kills at sea."

The Royal Air Force-United States bombing of U-boat bases and building yards also contributed to the decrease, Alexander said, and should have an "everincreasing effect."

He warned that the Allies should be prepared to meet "setbacks and periods of heavy losses" but said reports showed several "favorable tendencies" such as the fact that escort carriers, several of which are in service, had "proven their worth.

Each of the first five months this year showed a substantial reduction in merchant shipping losses compared to the corresponding period of last year and a saving of more than one-third on losses over the entire five months, he said.

Expects Decrease In Fish Production

NEW YORK, June 2—(CP)—Due to the shortage of manpower, Canada's fish production this year might run to only 750,000,000 pounds compared with 923,000,000 in 1941, a deficit of 155,000,000 pounds, Canada's fisheries minister, Ernest Bertrand, said here yesterday.

Early Settler, Arsene Marois, Dies: 67 Years

A member of a party of 43 colonists who came to Edmonton under the leadership of the Rev. Mr. Morin on August 5, 1892, Arsene J. Marois died at the General hospital Tuesday. He was 67 years old.

Mr. Marois was a boy of 16 when he came to Edmonton on the way to settle at Morinville. Other members of the party were Mr. and Mrs. F. X. Dubuc, Real Page, Martus Grothe, Louis Morasse, J. O. Guy, Joseph Blanche, Francis Finistere and daughter M. Lamontagne, P. Maisonneuve, Soverin Gervais, Mrs. Pierre Quintal and family, Harmas Marois, Damase Normandeau, A. Vachon, J. O. Belanger, J. O. Coulombe and D. Lemoyne.

The arrival of the party has been recorded in The Edmonton Bulletin's record of events of "30 Years Ago."

The pioneer, who was a native of Montreal, did not settle at Morinville, however, but homesteaded at Villeneuve for about eight years.

IN GOLD RUSH

Feeling that at the turn of the century, Alberta perhaps did not offer the opportunities for the adventure that he liked, Mr. Marois joined in the rush to the Yukon goldfields in 1900. While there he was taken seriously ill and was brought out by stage coach along the historic Yukon and Dawson trail and by later stages by boat to Vancouver. There he underwent an operation necessitating part of the removal of his stomach, an operation which was virtually unheard of in those days.

Twenty-eight years ago Mr. Marois returned to Edmonton, the scene of his first arrival in the west, to a city that had changed from a small town to a thriving city. In his last years here he was able to see it grow to a city of 100,000 and one of the most important air centres of the world.

IN BUSINESS

When he returned to Edmonton Mr. Marois started up business for himself and was founder of the Yukonia Product drugs.

To survive him he leaves his sister, Mrs. J. Morin. He was unmarried.

Funeral services will be held in the Immaculate Conception church with the Rev. Father Romeo Ketchen officiating. Burial will be made in the cemetery at St. Albert.

Connelly and McKinley, funeral directors, are in charge of the arrangements.

New Political Crisis Stirred Among French

ALGIERS, June 2—A new political crisis precipitated by Marcel Peyrouton's resignation as governor of Algeria resulted in postponement of a scheduled meeting of the French executive committee today and brought to a head the struggle between Gens. Charles de Gaulle and Henri-Honore Giraud for wartime leadership of the French empire.

The meeting of the committee, which will rule the empire until France itself is liberated, originally was scheduled for Tuesday, but was postponed when an impasse developed between de Gaulle and Giraud.

An apparent truce was arranged by Gen. Georges Catroux late yesterday, but Peyrouton's dispatch of letters of resignation to both General de Gaulle and Giraud with each general acting independently forced further, indefinite postponement of the meeting. Giraud's followers were said to have been particularly indignant over de Gaulle's action.

DE GAULLE ACCEPTS

De Gaulle, who has been demanding Peyrouton's ouster as a former Vichy collaborationist, was first to respond to the resignation letter. In a bid for political leadership of French Africa, he told Peyrouton to turn over his office to the secretary general of Algeria and to "consider yourself mobilized" as a captain of colonial infantry in the Middle East.

Giraud, on the other hand, urged Peyrouton to continue as governor general "provisionally" until the executive committee has completed its organization. Then, Giraud said, we would place Peyrouton in the colonial infantry with his old rank of captain, as requested by the governor.

Some Sleuths!

TORONTO, June 2.—(CP)—In the opinion of Charles Sanderson, the police here are remarkable sleuths. Monday his wallet was returned to him and a man arrested for theft before he knew his pockets had been picked.

WE'RE keeping our place in good condition—inside and out—with the best quality paint we can buy. I guess it's a patriotic duty: we avoid possible repairs or replacements supplies for which are needed for war use—and which may be hard to get anyway . . . " senior nurse at the R.C.A.F. hospital. She was awarded the Royal Red Cross, second class.

Maj. Macleod, who was awarded the Royal Red Cross, first class, is another graduate of University hospital. She was one of the most efficient and best-trained nurses at the University hospital. She went overseas in 1940 in charge of the first group of Edmonton nurses who left here for overseas. In the first Great War two brothers served with the 49th Battalion, Edmonton Regiment, one of whom was killed in action in France. The other achieved the distinction of being the only non-regular soldier to rise to command the Royal Canadian Regiment, at that time Canada's only permanent force infantry unit.

Only woman civilian in the province to receive recognition in the M.B.E., was Mrs. Mary H. Conquest, 10822 128 street, who is 70 years old. Notification of her "mention" in the birthday list, was handed to her Tuesday afternoon. Disbelieving first information that her "beloved King" would mention her, she opened a second enclosed envelope marked "secret," and read the few lines that told her she had been awarded the M.B.E. for "patriotic and philanthropic work."

BORN IN SCOTLAND

Mrs. Conquest, born in Stirling, Scotland, was married in London, Eng., where her seven children, five of whom are living, were born. The family came to Canada in 1913, and for some years Mr. Conquest played in stock companies in Calgary. For 60 years, her husband had operated newspapers in the old country and in Alberta. The last "sheet" was printed in Athabasca, and continued up until 1942, when Mr. Conquest died.

In 1931 Mrs. Conquest started broadcasting, and at the beginning was heard for one hour once a week over various radio stations in Alberta.

KNEW CHURCHILL

Mrs. Conquest knew Prime Minister Winston Churchill when he was a young man. She is an ardent fan of the wartime premier and says she knows we are in safe hands.

Of three sons and two daughters, three are connected with the services. They are George Conquest, teacher at Westglen school, Edmonton, and a lieutenant in the 61st Field Battery, R.C.A.; Lt. Charles Conquest; recently at Gordon Head Camp., B.C., and now at Brandon, Man.; and Nilda Gladys Conquest, nursing sister at Nanaimo, B.C., military hospital.

Another son, Stanley, lives at Britannia Mountain, B.C., while a second daughter, Mrs. Margaret Cole, resides at Coleville, Sask.

Members of the armed forces mentioned were Sapper Colin Andrew Cavil, 11936 81 street; Flt. Sgt. Earl Victor Roy Merrick, No. 4 I.T.S., Edmonton; AB. Eric Ernest Binnie, Suite 4 McDougall Court; Col. Lorne Vernon Janes, 13114 106 avenue, Edmonton, and WO1. James H. Blundell of No. 3 "M" Depot. Civilians receiving mention in the list were Chief Constable Matthew Blackwood, and deputy provincial secretary Edmund Trowbridge.

Sapper C. A. Cavil, who was awarded the B.E.M., has been overseas for three years with the Royal Canadian Engineers, having joined the service shortly after war was declared. He was formerly an employee of the Canadian National Railways. Married, his wife continues to reside in Edmonton. His parents live at Vermilion. He has five sisters and one brother. He was mentioned in press dispatches for valuable services at Gibraltar.

BORN AT CALGARY

Flt. Sgt. E. V. R. Merrick, awarded the D.F.M., is also of Alberta, and was born in Calgary 35 years ago. The first 16 years of his life were spent on a farm originally homesteaded by his parents. For 15 years he was employed in the Imperial Bank at various points in the province, and left the bank as secretary-treasurer of the town, hospital and school at Coronation. After joining the R.C.A.F. he spent a year in Eastern Canada and came to Edmonton about two years ago. He is married and has two sons, nine and seven years old.

A sports enthusiast, he participated in track and field in years past. He is also interested in church, Sunday school, Red Cross and community work.

AB. E. E. Binnie, who was awarded the British Empire Medal, is the son of Constable A. D. W. Binnie, R.C.M.P., Edmonton. Formerly employed by Fraser Motors in the city, he joined the navy in July, 1940. One other brother is also in the service—Sergeant Victor Binnie, Lord Strathcona Horse, overseas. Another brother is employed at Aircraft Repair Ltd. in Edmonton. A sister, Mrs. I. Semkowitch, resides in McDougall Court. Since his award he has been promoted to the rank of leading seaman.

AB. Binnie was born in Calgary in 1921, and came to Edmonton when nine years old. He attended McKay avenue school here. His citation read:

"During prolonged engagements with U-boats in heavy attacks in the North Atlantic, this rating performed his duty with certainty of precision which led to sighting of U-boats on five occasions, thereby contributing to the saving of merchant ships."

Col. Lorne Vernon Janes, who was awarded the O.B.E., is today in full command of a divisional dental organization in England. He was a member of the Canadian Dental Corps during the First Great War. Previous to leaving Canada for overseas service he served in Augsut, 1941, Col. Janes was in charge of M.D. No. 13 with headquarters in Calgary.

Born at Watford, Ont., Col. Janes was graduated from the Chicago College of Dental Surgery and began his practice in Edmonton in 1914, just before the First World War broke out. He is a past president of the Alberta Dental Association. Two sons are in the services —Bill, with the R.C.N. and Bob, with the Dental Corps. One daughter, Lorna, and Mrs. Janes, reside in the city. Two brothers and a sister live at Watford, Ont., and two other brothers reside at Toronto and Halifax.

BORN IN IRELAND

Chief Constable Matthew Blackwood, one of the two Edmonton civilians to receive mention, was awarded the M.B.E. Born June 1, 1888, at Seaford, County Down, Ulster, Northern Ireland, he arrived in Canada at the age of 16, with his parents. For a time the family lived at Leduc, where they farmed. Later the senior Blackwood was a contractor in Edmonton, and then until his recent retirement, was with Western Grocers in Edmonton.

JOINS FORCE

Chief Blackwood joined the Edmonton police force May 11, 1912. Thirteen years later he became deputy chief, and in June, 1942, he rose to chief officer. The "Chief", as he is called by all who know him, has seen and learned much during his years of service to the city. He had seen Edmonton grow from the town he entered in 1904 to the city it is today. He has seen it as it was when a settlement in the North West Territories, to the day when it became a provincial capital.

Chief Blackwood received his education in the land of his birth, at Drumanesse national school in County Down and the model school in Belfast. His hobbies are gardening and curling. At present a member of the Alberta avenue curling club, he is a past president of the Thistle Curling Club.

Edmund Trowbridge, deputy provincial secretary, who was awarded the M.B.E., was born in Toronto, where he was educated and married. He first entered the service of the government in 1901.

LONG SERVICE

During that period of this country's history, the North West Territories were governed from Regina. Four years later, when the province of Alberta came into being, the government was transferred to Edmonton. Mr. Trowbridge was appointed assistant clerk of the executive council of Alberta in 1906. He became deputy provincial secretary in April 1910 and in 1935 office of superintendent of insurance was added to his duties.

A former baseball player, he was always interested in sports, such as swimming and golfing. He is a member of the Rotary, Mayfair Golf and Country club, Edmonton golf club, A.F. & A.M. and his spare time he was an amateur vaudeville actor and tap dancer. He was active in all work pertaining to the welfare of the city and the province for many years. He has one son and three daughters.

OTHERS WELL KNOWN

Others in the province well known receive civilian recognition were Dr. E. A. Archer, Lamont; Alex Walker, Dominion secretary of the Canadian Legion; A. W. Sharp, postmaster of Dawson Creek. One other member of the services mentioned in the birthday list was Capt. Charles Franklin Egan, R.C.A.M.C., of High Prairie, who was awarded the M.B.E.

Dr. Archer, to whom the C.B.E. was awarded, is president of the Canadian Medical Association and medical superintendent of Lamont hospital. He has contributed greatly to the uplift of society in Alberta in assisting in the organization of community hospitals throughout the province.

Alex Walker, veteran of the last war, was awarded the C.B.E. Ever since the Great War, he has interested himself in the affairs of returned men, and of the Calgary branch of the Canadian Legion, which organization he became president. He then became president of the provincial command of the Legion, and later became Dominion president.

TIRELESS WORKER

Mr. Walker is a tireless worker for the returned men and all they are interested in.

A. W. Sharp, to whom the B.E.M. was awarded, saved mail and other public property when fire destroyed the Dawson Creek post office, last year.

One other award of the M.B.E. to a member of the armed services was made, and that to WO. James Henry Blundell, of No. 3 Manning Depot, in Edmonton.

WO1. J. H. Blundell is depot sergeant-major at No. 3 "M" Depot here. Prior to enlisting in the R.C.A.F. he was a member of the city of Winnipeg police force. He enlisted as an AC2, and by dint of meritorious service rapidly gained promotion. He served first at No. 1 "M" depot, Toronto, then No. 2 "M" depot, Brandon and then was posted to No. 3 "M" depot here. As garrison sergeant-major he is largely responsible for discipline at the depot and his efficiency and devotion to duty are considered major factors in building up the reputation enjoyed by the depot.

The British fleet has completely blocked Axis ocean traffic, he said.

625 Canadians Receive Honors in King's List

the Canadian Women's Army Corps and one of the women's division of the R.C.A.F.

The civilian list marked a partial fulfilment of the recommendations of the parliamentary committee which investigated the question of honors and decorations last year and decided Canada's ban on titles should not apply to memberships in British orders of chivalry which did not carry titles.

HIGHEST AWARDS

The highest awards conferred in the list were Companionship in the Order of the Bath, granted to nine senior officers, and Companionship in the Order of St. Michael and St. George, granted to 15 civilians.

The honor roll of the civilians recalls many phases of the war effort.

Col. O. M. Biggar, chairman of the Canadian section of the joint Canada-United States defence board, received the C.M.G. So did Harry J. Carmichael, co-ordinator of production department of munitions.

Pierre Dupuy, Canada's last diplomatic representative to the Vichy government who carried on there for the British and Canadian governments under difficult conditions, is another who gets the C.M.G.

The financial side is recognized in an award to George W. Spinney, chairman of the national war finance committee, responsible for the Victory Loan campaigns.

ARMY AWARDS

The top bracket awards in the army go to Lt.-Gen. E. W. Sansom, commander of corps overseas, which means all lieutenant-generals are now Companions of the Bath. A. G. L. McNaughton, commander of the Canadian army overseas, had his before the present war while Kenneth Stuart, chief of the general staff, and H. D. G. Crerar, a corps commander overseas, received their's in the New Year's list.

The C.B. also went this time to the army commanders on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and in Newfoundland to commanders of divisions in Canada and overseas, and to the vice-chief of the general staff at Ottawa, Maj.-Gen. J. C. Murchie.

Other army awards were six bestowals of the C.B.E. (Commander of the Order of the British Empire), 24 of the O.B.E. (Officer of that Order), 38 of the M.B.E. (Member of the Order), five Royal Red Cross, first class and nine second class and 24 British Empire Medals.

The naval list brought the number of C.B.'s in that service to two when Rear - Admiral George C. Jones, vice-chief of staff, received it. The chief of naval staff, Vice-Admiral Percy Nelles, received it last New Year.

Other naval awards were two C.B.E.'s, nine O.B.E.'s, six M.B.E.'s, two, Royal Red Crosses, second class, 20 British Empire Medals, two Distinguished Crosses, and 47 Mentions in Dispatches.

66 OPERATIONAL

Of the naval awards 66 were operational "for various action in the face of the enemy." These included the mentions in dispatches, one of them posthumous to the late Lieut.-Cmdr. T. M. W. Colby, of Victoria who lost his life when the corvette Weyburn was sunk in the Mediterranean.

Air Vice-Marshal G. O. Johnson, air officer commanding-in-chief, eastern air command, and Air Vice-Marshal Robert Leckie, air member for training who heads the air training organization, received the C.B. Air Marshal L. S. Breadner, chief of staff, received the same award in the New Year's list.

The other air force awards are four C.B.E.'s, seven O.B.E.'s, 19 M.B.E.'s, two Royal Red Cross, second class, 24 B.E.M.'s, 18 mentions in dispatches, 20 Air Force Crosses, seven Air Force Medals, and 19 commendations.

BRITISH LIST

Some of the awards age to R.A.F. men on duty with the training organization in Canada. In addition to the awards in the Canadian list, the British list, also announced last night, contained the names of six Canadians in the R.A.F. granted non-operational awards.

The civilian list conferred the Imperial Service Order, reserved for civil servants of at least 25 years service, on 10 officials of Dominion or provincial governments.

The rest of the list was made up of 21 bestowals of the C.B.E., 65 of the O.B.E., 150 of the M.B.E. and 24 of the British Empire Medal.

Sees Canada 4th Military Power

By FOSTER BARCLAY

LONDON, June 2.—(CP)—Air Secretary Sir Archibald Sinclair yesterday told the House of Commons that Canada will emerge from the war the fourth strongest military power in the world.

He made the statement in speaking for the government in a debate on post-war civil aviation, telling the house that the British government would pursue discussions with the Dominions but could not tell them what to do. He presumably referred to Britain, the United States and Russia as being the leading military powers ahead of Canada.

"We have put first in our work the importance of coming to an agreement with the Dominions," Sir Archibald said of the government's civil aviation plans. "After the war we shall either be in a world dominated by the United States or the Soviet Union, or the centre of a great empire bound together by air routes."

The use of a burning lens to generate fire was known to the Greeks.

made other courtesy calls on business leaders in the city.

The party was greeted at the C.P.R. station by a group of Edmonton civic officials and leading business men. Included among those on hand to welcome Mr. Coleman and his fellow C.P.R. directors were: R. H. Settle, president of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce; city commissioners R. J. Gibb and John Ferguson; John Callaghan, former general manager Northern Alberta Railways; H. M. R. Evans, John McDougall, Charles E. Campbell, publisher of The Edmonton Bulletin; J. G. Nickerson, manager of the Edmonton main branch Royal Bank of Canada; W. A. MacDonald, publisher of The Edmonton Journal; E. G. Ellerton, Capt. Wm. R. May, O.B.E., D.F.C., manager of Canadian Airways Training Ltd.; Grant Mc-Conachie, general manager, western lines, Canadian Pacific Airlines; Thomas Dickson, manager Edmonton branch Bank of Montreal; S. V. Jeffrey, Reg T. Rose, secretary-manager Edmonton Chamber of Commerce, and F. N. Lett.

The following railway officials also greeted their chief: C. A. Steward, district freight agent; W. A. Mitchell, city passenger agent; E. J. Taylor, local freight agent; Ross Empey, paymaster; F. V. Robbins, C.P.R. telegraph general agent, and R. J. Simpson, telegraph inspector, and J. M. McArthur, general manager Northern Alberta Railways, who travelled north with the party.

DEFINITE OPINIONS

Questioned regarding plans for development of his own Canadian Pacific Airlines, Mr. Coleman said that the future "was a little obscure. I have very definite opinions as to the course which the development of airlines in Canada, and from Canada overseas, should take, but until the Dominion government policy is more clearly defined, it would be improper to give publicity to my ideas."

Mr. Coleman said that the purpose in travelling to Dawson Creek and Waterways over the Northern Alberta Railways is to see at first hand the developments which are taking place in these areas which have come into such widespread prominence in recent months due to wartime traffic.

He said that such improvements can be made from time to time on this railway will be considered.

"There is no doubt room for further rail extension in Canada, and Canada is going to develop northward. It is likely that many possibilities in our northern territories have been overlooked. Until the war is over, the shortage of material and labor will be so acute that only such extensions can be undertaken as are essential to the prosecution of our war effort," Mr. Coleman stated.

Commenting on the current year's wheat and other agricultural production Mr. Coleman said, "it is most difficult to attempt to predict in figures the wheat production of the west, but from indications during the tour west conditions appear favorable to a good yield.

"I have no doubt in my mind, however, as to the ability of the railways to handle the crop when it is threshed. Years of experience and an organization built up through the years enabled us to take care of the wheat crop in addition to other business, he stated.

"Availability of storage space and shipping tonnage are more likely to be more important factors than the ability of the railways to carry the crop," Mr. Coleman said. "The past years' crop, for example, due to lack of storage at the lakehead, represented a smaller fraction of our total carryings than in many years, so that we are able to allocate much rolling stock to other war materials and goods.

Asked if any staff changes were contemplated in the Edmonton and Alberta divisions Mr. Coleman said these were matters for the local officers to decide, but added that no staff changes seem to be impending.

Hon. Charles Dunning said he was on a sight-seeing and fact-finding expedition, and declined to make any statement until his tour of Northern Alberta has been completed.

INDUSTRIAL PICTURE

"Canadians can be reasonably proud of their production and transportation systems all over the country," said L. J. Belnap of Montreal, in a brief interview.

Mr. Belnap, president of Consolidated Paper Company, Montreal, said that the industrial picture all the Pacific Coast is as satisfactory as can be expected. The material situation, he said, was "spotty" as far as coast industries were concerned, and he added, "we all know how the manpower situation is right now."

The Kootenay district lines of the company are carrying peak loads now, Mr. Belnap said in answer to a question but material is being moved without difficulty. Lines between Trail and Kimberley are carrying particularly heavy consignments, he stated.

Generally speaking, the crop situation on the prairies looks very good although the season is "a little late", Mr. Belnap remarked. The railroads are expecting no difficulties, however, in moving this season's crop.

The western system of the railway company has been found in good condition, Mr. Belnap answer another question. The party, returning from Vancouver, came via the Kettle Valley line, and some time was spent at Trail, Nelson and other Kootenay points.

Morris W. Wilson, president and managing director of the Royal Bank of Canada, is another director with the party. He had no stale-

Dowding Made Baron in King's Birthday Honors

By LOUIS V. HUNTER

LONDON, June 2.—(CP)—Air Chief Marshal Sir Hugh Dowding, who commanded the R.A.F. heroes of the Battle of Britain in 1940, was created a baron in the King's birthday honors list published today.

Only one new baron was created. The list included two new baronets, 32 knight bachelors and two companions of honor besides hundreds of awards to members of the armed forces. More than 3,000 of all ranks were mentioned in dispatches.

Air Commodore A. C. Critchley, Calgary-born member of the house of commons, was made Commander of the Order of the British Empire.

The Canadian list was unusually long, including 625 names.

Air Marshal Richard Hallam Peck was made Knight Commander of the Bath.

Among the high-ranking officers of the army, navy and air force to become Knight Commander of the Bath are Admiral Sir Bruce Fraser, commander of the home fleet, known as an aircraft carrier expert and one of the greatest gunners in the fleet, and Vice-Admiral St. George Lister, who commanded the aircraft carriers covering the North African landings. Admiral Lister also commanded the aircraft carrier "Glorious" which smashed the Italian fleet at Taranto. He now is commander of the new aircraft carrier "Indomitable."

miles north of Belleville, May 29, 1883. Dr. Dafoe was the son of a country doctor. William Allan Dafoe, and Rosa Van Dusen. After graduating from the University of Toronto in 1907, he went to the thriving lumber town of Callander to practice medicine.

For 27 years he was an obscure country doctor, unknown outside the Callander district where he had delivered babies, treated injured lumbermen and fought north country blizzards to doctor whooping cough and measles.

He brought the five quintuplets into the world the morning of May 28, 1934, just one day before his 51st birthday, and later he described the experience as hazy and dreamlike. Hours after the birth he could hardly believe it had happened.

REFUSED HIGH POSTS

Despite the fame that came to him after performing what many men regarded as a modern miracle of science, Dr. Dafoe refused posts in famous clinics and remained in Callander practise. In 1935, King George V appointed him a member of the Order of the British Empire and he was made a life member of the Academy of Medicine at Toronto, the Ontario Medical Association and the Canadian Medical Association.

Dr. Dafoe was a member of the board of guardians appointed July 28, 1934, to look after the quints' interests. When the Ontario legislature passed an act March 15, 1935, making the quints wards of the King, he was the only guardian re-appointed. He resigned as guardian in December, 1939, after having named as defendant in several legal actions brought by the quints' father, Oliva Dionne, some question as to their affairs.

He continued to act as physician to the five sisters until March 9, 1942, when he was succeeded by Dr. Allan Royal of North Bay. Mitchell Hepburn, then premier of Ontario, had announced Feb. 15, 1942, that Dr. Dafoe had submitted his resignation as physician.

At that time Dr. Dafoe explained: "I feel my period of usefulness is over. I hope I have done a good job."

TRYING PERIOD

The first few weeks after the quints were born were the most trying of Dr. Dafoe's life and only the application of the best scientific knowledge kept the feeble spark of life flickering in the five tiny hearts.

He called on his brother, Dr. William A. Dafoe, prominent Toronto gynecologist, for medical advice and once told a group which praised him for his achievement: "I don't forget Bill when you're handing around this praise. He supplied the brains."

In 1914 Dr. Dafoe married Bertha Morrison, daughter of a Halifax clergyman, but she died after bearing him a son, William Allen, now serving with the Royal Canadian navy.

ments for the press, but remarked that the prairie weather was much milder than that experienced by the party in the east.

Mr. Wilson joined the service of the Royal Bank in 1897, and has been stationed in all parts of Canada. He was appointed general manager of the bank in 1929, vice-president in 1931, and president and managing director in 1934.

Mr. Wilson was appointed as North American assistant to Lord Beaverbrook, who was in charge of British aircraft production, in 1941. In September, 1941, he was appointed chairman of the British Supply Council in North America.

Is Commissioned

J. B. Harrington, 20 years old, whose mother, Mrs. J. Harrington, 9856 85 avenue, has received word of his promotion to the rank of Pilot Officer after having completed his round of 30 flights in bombing attacks. His father is instructor Harrington of Currie Barracks. PO. Harrington was born in Edmonton and received his education at Leduc. He joined the R.C.A.F. in 1941, and was graduated as a wireless airgunner at Arvin, Ont. His sister Maureen is a member of the R.C.A.F. (W.D.), and is taking a stenographer's course in Toronto.

the shore during the second bombardment, but the ships escaped without casualties in both attacks, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters reported. No damage was sustained in the first attack.

The bombardments were the second and third by Allied warships since the fall of Tunisia, the first having been made early on the morning of May 13.

Bombers and fighter bombers, meantime, continued to rain bombs on Pantelleria in relays, the communique said.

The new country opened up by the Alaska Highway and the air Alaska service will have its responsibilities, said Mr. Bracken. There were many coal deposits in Alberta still to be developed and he preferred not to discuss the fuel policy which he thought should be adopted in this connection.

Extensive search was being made for oil in Alberta. He had been informed important new wells had been brought in at Fort Norman, although he had not visited the field.

The tremendous expanse of country between Edmonton and Whitehorse in the Yukon was described by Mr. Bracken this way: "It is twice as far between these two centres as it is between Edmonton and Winnipeg. Yet I passed gold near Dawson City one forenoon and was in Edmonton that night. "What a difference from the gold rush days."

The last few hundred miles on the flight to Whitehorse was over the most wonderful mountain scenery he had ever seen, Mr. Bracken said—even more impressive than over the Rockies farther south.

Edmonton had assumed the dimensions of a boom and the great air development there would make the city a centre of a great international route and after the war.

Along the southern section of the Alaska highway there were agricultural possibilities.

Less for Civilians

An official publication throws a timely but not very cheering side-light on the food situation and outlook in the United States—and inferentially in Canada.

In 1942 more than 12 per cent of the food raised for human consumption in the United States went for military and lend-lease purposes. In 1943 these requirements are expected to take from 20 to 25 per cent of the beef produced; 35 to 40 per cent of the pork; 25 to 30 per cent of the butter; 15 to 20 per cent of the cheese; 40 to 45 per cent of the condensed and evaporated milk; 40 to 60 per cent of the lard; 20 to 25 per cent of the edible fats and oils; 50 to 60 per cent of the fruits and vegetables; 10 to 15 per cent of the wheat and 15 to 20 per cent of the rice. This would be about 25 per cent of the total food production for human consumption.

In relation to food as to other things having a bearing on the war, Canada and the United States comprise in effect a single area. Scarcity on either side of the line must draw supplies from the other, and the level of sufficiency or insufficiency tend to become uniform. If 25 per cent of the food produced in the United States must go for military and lend-lease purposes, Canada will have to help make up the deficiency. That is another reason why meat is rationed here—and why some more commodities may have to be added to the list before the summer is out.

Whoever this year produces something people can eat will be doing a service to the country, to the cause of human freedom—and also to himself.

Tojo's Ships Weren't There

Extinction of the Japanese garrison on Attu is the first step toward the recovery of United States territory from the Tokyo gangsters. Outside New Guinea and Guadalcanal it is also the first territory of any of the United Nations to be regained in the Pacific. And tiny as the island is, only in Africa have Axis forces been driven out of any other area in any other theatre.. Attu may therefore be regarded as a symbol of the turn of the tide of war.

And as a symbol it is the more meaningful because the enemy did not even attempt a major effort to hold the island. Tokyo radio long ago informed its gullible listeners that the American fleet had been destroyed, and the broadcasters have been re-sinking units of that fleet ever since. But the significant fact is that Japan's battle fleet did not venture into the Attu waters to save the garrison there from destruction.

The radio men should explain to their trustful hearers why the big warships did not dare to challenge the ghosts of their supposedly vanished antagonists. The reason of course is that the Tokyo radio has been lying all through the piece. The proof that Tojo knows the United States fleet to still be in being and ready for business is that he kept his ships in home waters rather than send them to rescue the island garrison at the risk of bringing on a general sea battle.

The events in Attu thus demonstrate that the Japanese fleet is not at all anxious to try its luck in a show-down fight. Perhaps Yamamoto the boaster knew when to die.

Untaxed Buildings

At their Ottawa conference the Mayors and other representatives of Canadian municipalities adopted a resolution to the effect that the Dominion should pay indemnities to municipal treasuries in lieu of taxes on war plants wholly or partly Government-owned, these being exempt from municipal taxation. Why the proposal was limited to war plants is not very clear. A good argument, in some respects a better one, can be made that some financial consideration should be made to a municipality because Government office and other buildings therein are also exempt. War plants are temporary and the property may return to the tax roll when the fighting ends. But buildings which house branches of regular Government services are permanent, and the loss of revenue to the municipality is continuous, in peace and war.

The contention is of course made that if one of these buildings is located in a city or town the population and pay-roll of the place are thereby increased. But the same holds true of an industrial establishment, or a store, or a privately-owned utility enterprise, and none of these are excused from paying municipal taxes. Nor are administrative buildings located solely with a view to serving the people who live in a city or town, they serve the people of the entire district. But the city or town taxpayers have to foot the bills to provide police and fire protection and all other municipal services to such buildings. It would be no more than fair that some reasonable grant should be made to the municipality in return.

Getting in Line

When Gen. Giraud offered Gen. De Gaulle a 50-50 arrangement under which they would alternate as chief of the French forces fighting with the Allies in Africa he put the Fighting French leader on the spot. De Gaulle could not refuse without seeming to be more anxious to disagree than to help liberate France. He accepted and went to Algiers, and an executive committee has been set up there to govern the French empire.

This it can be hoped marks the end of the feud and the beginning of close co-operation in marshalling French forces and resources of the colonies for the restoration of freedom to the motherland. Excepting Martinique, whose governor is halting between loyalty to Laval and regard for his hungry subjects, the remaining French possessions overseas are now Allies. Indo-China was handed over to Japan on terms which for the time take it out of the list of French colonies.

Perhaps as a result of this closing of the breach, the French warships which were immobilized at Alexandria when France fell have joined the Allies by decision of their officers and crews. They may not be of much use immediately, for they have been long out of service and will need an overhaul. But this removes any chance that they may fall into the hands of the Axis. The squadron includes a battleship and seven lighter craft, and will eventually be a worth while addition to the Allied sea power.

As the Dakar warships are already in United States ports and the main body of the French fleet was scuttled at Marseilles, this ends the threat that a considerable number of French ships might be turned over by Laval on demand of Hitler—which demand he was entitled to make under the terms of the armistice. The elimination of that threat is a victory won for the Allies by diplomacy. It has probably saved us the loss of some warships and freighters and the lives of many seamen.

Mr. Attlee, Britain's deputy prime minister, says Germany, Italy and occupied Europe will be bombed until final victory is won. "does'nt say pleas from enemy or neutral sources for a truce to ale war." This confirms rumors that attempts have been made, through neutral states, to get the Allies to ground their bombers. It also makes clear that these and similar attempts will get no attention. That is as it should be.

Politics Poor Basis for Better Post-War World

World Accord Grows Out Of Humanities, Not Treaties

By HAROLD L. WEIR

From the more zealous proponents of a cut-and-dried post-war order, Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt are receiving a good deal of criticism over what is alleged to be their lukewarmness towards the machinery for perpetual peace.

Harold L. Weir

Both these statesmen have counselled caution in these matters and have emphasized the view that we must first win the peace before we decide how to make it eternal.

Mr. Churchill has further insisted the more fanatic pacifists by declaring that he does not believe it is his job to preside over the liquidation of the British Empire.

This statement is regarded as reactionary. And the traditional isolationists of the United States, including Bertie McCormick and such dubious persons as Hamilton Fish have arisen in their flaming wrath to declare that a nation which refuses to sacrifice a little thing like the British Empire for the sake of Utopia must be deeply mired in guile and selfishness.

Political

Now I am quite sure that Mr. Churchill and President Roosevelt are as conscious aware as anyone else that whatever movement is going to save the world must originate and gather momentum before the war ends and we emerge into that emotional hangover which always seems to accompany the cessation of exhausting hostilities.

But the reason these gentlemen are lukewarm is that most of the formulae which have been proposed to precipitate Utopia upon a waiting world are political formulae and Mr. Churchill and President Roosevelt, being men of vision —and of some disillusionment— know thoroughly well that politics is the stupidest and most hopeless kind of a foundation for a brave new world.

You can't reform the world by law any more than you can get a man out of hell on a writ of habeas corpus.

You can't make laws to perpetuate peace any more than you can legislate a man into heaven.

And that is the weakness, the fatal weakness, of nine-tenths of the post-war planning.

That is why Messrs. Churchill and Roosevelt are disinclined to wax too enthusiastic about it.

Sovereignty

Mr. Sumner Welles, of the American department of state, a highly capable man of unbiased intentions, offered this week a set of "cardinal principles" for securing world peace. Here they are:

A combination of armed forces which may be used regionally or on a broader scale, to prevent aggression and enforce peace.

An international tribunal to which international controversies can be referred.

An efficient international method for the outlawing of certain kinds of armaments and for the inspection of all national armaments.

Creation of organizations to deal with economic and financial matters, and to advise the United Nations.

Recognition of the principle of the equal sovereignty of all states and establishment of freedom and self-government for all peoples.

Strangely enough, the bitter parados in all this is invisible to Mr. Welles. It is simply this:

That the small nations of the world have been fighting for one thing above everything else, namely, to preserve their own sovereignty. And no nation can retain its sovereignty if it subscribes in the slightest degree to any internationalization of any function. An international tribunal of law, an international army, even an international police force will derogate from that national freedom which we have been fighting and dying for nearly four years to preserve.

It is an unfortunate fact and it is true. It is what sterilized the League of Nations.

Humanities

It was the tragedy of the last generation that the world tried to achieve world peace in 1918 by law. It will be an even greater tragedy if we try to repeat the unhappy experiment at the close of this war.

For the things that knit communities together and create accord between nations are not treaties and elaborate political structures. They are the common humanities.

If the peoples of this earth are ever to stop slaughtering one another, it will not be because there is a law against it but because they no longer bear animus against one another.

That is the thing to achieve, to purge hate and prejudice and suspicion from the human heart.

How can it be achieved?

Through education, through travel, through an intelligent and honest teaching of history.

If we want to establish an era of world peace, we will set up an exchange system between the universities of the world and keep the diplomats and politicians at home. We will circulate the best students through the greatest centres of learning so that we will not only learn to appreciate each other's cultures but to borrow freely from them.

If we want to end war, we will so revise the world educational system, by mutual agreement, that young men and women will learn to develop character rather than the knack of manipulating stocks.

If we desire to outlaw fighting, we will initiate a cheap system of travel so that the common people will be able to go abroad and acquire a new respect for the ways and habits of their neighbors.

If we want to breed a spirit of mutual trust, we will saturate our young people in the honest history of all countries so that they will understand that no nation has a monopoly on intelligence and heroism.

The historians are among the greatest liars among all our literary men. The partisan writing of history is one of the greatest crimes against civilization. It must be ended.

These, very briefly, are the roads that lead to peace.

International armies, more and more treaties and huge organizations of states—in short, the political road to another tremendous disillusionment and another world war.

Stalin's Dissolution of the Comintern

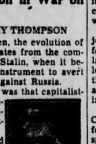

Organization Failed Badly To Function in War on Russia

BY DOROTHY THOMPSON

As we have seen, the evolution of the Comintern dates from the coming to power of Stalin, when it became solely an instrument to avert successful war against Russia.

Stalin's theory was that capitalist-imperialist countries in combination would attack Russia.

He believed that Munich was confirmation of this. He believed the Pacifist activities of the Comintern began in all countries. It was Stalin's greatest concern then, to split the capitalist alliance, even by signing a "pact of friendship" with Hitler. In this case Stalin behaved as any shrewd nationalist leader would behave, but not as the leader of the Comintern could be expected to behave. The various Communist parties in backing this move revealed themselves as exclusively concerned with the welfare of the Soviet Union, even at the sacrifice of every revolutionary principle of their own countries.

Dorothy Thompson

"Phony War"

But history did not develop, either according to the pattern of Trotsky or Stalin. It burst all preconceived theories.

During the first eight months of the war Stalin suspected a "phony war." The Russians had the same concept as Hitler, that with the collapse of France, Britain would make a deal with Germany. So, during this period, American Communists were attempting to keep this country disarmed and out of the war.

Hess flew to England with the object of winning British collaboration for war against Russia. The speculation of Stalin, as well as of Hitler, was that Britain would act in the interests of the "ruling class", and not according to larger national interests. Both were mistaken.

But by this, the concept of the Comintern was also proved wrong, for the Communists accepted this split between "Liberals" and "Tories" and had tried to exploit it. But the common British National interests proved stronger.

Misestimating Britain, no less than Stalin misestimated her, and too late to change his course, Hitler attacked Russia and a "Tory" prime minister immediately accepted an alliance with Russia.

History will prove that this was the doom of Hitler. But it was also the doom of the Comintern.

Plan Failed

For with the attack on Russia, nothing that the Communist party have had planned. The strongest Communist party in Europe had been the German. But German workers did not arise to defend the Soviet Union, nor did they desert in masses on the Russian front.

In China, which has the strongest Communist party of any country, the Communists fought Japan, but so did Chiang Kai-Shek. In fact the history of this war has demonstrated that the defense of the Soviet union does not depend upon Communist parties in other countries, but upon the arrangements that the Soviet Union is able to make with other governments.

At the beginning of this war, Stalin had the choice of waging a nationalist war or a class war. In no appeal to the Russian people has Stalin ever denied the non-capitalist structure of the country. But he has stressed the national interests of the Russian people against a foreign invader. He found in a showdown that Mother Russia was a better slogan than Father Marx.

Waited

Well, why then did he not dissolve the Comintern at the beginning of his part?

No doubt he waited to see whether the German proletariat would rise and make a revolution.

Also, he remained suspicious of the western countries. Would they really fight, or would they hope that Germany and Russia should exhaust each other, and then come in, either as sole victors, or even make a deal with Nazism purged of Hitler? The Comintern was doomed, in my belief, on the day that American troops landed in North Africa, and Churchill and Roosevelt announced "unconditional surrender." It was no longer wise for Stalin to ride two horses at the same time.

War Aims

Furthermore, Stalin has national war aims for the Soviet union. He wants his hands free, in the future. It makes, for instance, a difference, whether he looks at Germany with eyes of the Soviet union, as a great power, or views it through the eyes of the Comintern. For the interests of the German revolution, and of the Soviet power, are not necessarily identical.

Stalin, in contrast to Trotsky at Brest-Litovsk, is not going to relinquish any Russian national interests for the sake of the brotherhood of workers all over the world. In fact, anyone who suggests it is a fifth columnist and gets shot.

Therefore it is logical that Stalin should dissolve the comintern. The last value that it had for the Soviet union was its nuisance value to the world abroad. Probably, he has kept something he had no more use for, in order to sell it as part of a deal. This explains the timin—right now—when there may be a meeting with President Roosevelt. When Italy may be getting out of the war, and when Stalin may even wish to win from the Vatican a concordat.

People who doubt his sincerity simply do not see the picture in the frame of history. Nothing he has ever done was more sincere.

Swedish King Is Influential

No Mere Figurehead But Actual Influence in Politics

By RAYMOND CLAPPER

STOCKHOLM—Probably no monarch or chief of state anywhere plays his part quite as King Gustav. He is far from a figurehead, as he demonstrated in one war crisis. Instead of age reducing him to a mere name, I have the world of an opposition firebrand that the king's 85 years are a mighty force in Sweden.

His very age gives him a patriarchial power which he does not hesitate to use in both large and small things occasionally. Indeed under Swedish law the king is the principal representative of the people's will, in which fact lies his responsibility and his right to interfere whenever the seriousness of the situation calls for such action on his part.

Raymond Clapper

Yesterday I saw him play tennis on a public court. Several of us had been invited to be presented. The king came out of the tennis dressing room, wearing long flannels, a long white polo coat and white hat, and carrying a racket. He stopped and chatted with us, apologised for trying to play tennis at his age. As he said, he liked the game so why not play? It is remarkable that any person of 85 could be active on his feet through such a game, much less handle a racket with the quick co-ordination required.

We visitors regarded it as phenomenal, but there was no excitement around the court, which was open to all on payment of a small fee. Several persons were playing on other courts, and perhaps more than a hundred persons scattered around the club house veranda, talking among themselves. Only a dozen or so bothered to sit in the gallery to watch him play, although this was the first time the king had played outdoors since his serious illness some months ago.

Not even Premier Hansson, prime minister for a decade and boss of the Social Democratic party, feels strong enough to oppose the king on a showdown—as when the Germans demanded permission to send a division through Sweden to help the Finns. The Social Democrats were against allowing the German division to go through, but considered this a violation of neutrality, and also they were against the Nazis anyway. However, the king steered his country through without becoming involved in the war. It was a probability that, if permission had been refused, the Germans would have forcibly entered Sweden. The king took a strong position for letting the division go through, but he was emphatic that no more could be permitted again.

There has been much discussion about the dividing line between the king and the prime minister. The king took responsibility for the action. The fact that it helped to prevent the Russians from over-running Finland made the move popular with those in Sweden who struggle for Russia. This incident demonstrated the political power of the king, although it is not exercised frequently.

The Social Democratic party were in the majority, but the Conservatives joined in the wartime coalition. The present issue now is over whether to continue the coalition after the war or to return to party government, feeling that the present static condition is a bad thing to continue indefinitely. They accept it now only as a necessary evil.

One effect of it is to drive the discontented into the Communist ranks for an outlet. One armament manufacturer told me that his plant, with 2,000 thousand employees, has 500 enrolled party members and a thousand others who are sympathetic and attend Communist meetings. The Communist party is small in Sweden, but is growing as a protest against the static, cozy government coalition.

That is another reason why some of the younger Social Democrats want to get back to normal party government, with healthy opposition. They figure that Conservative opposition would be a good thing for the Social Democratic majority, which would then rally its forces into more active life.

NEW YORK, June 2—(AP)—Easier tendencies appeared in the stock market today after leaders faltered in mild attempts to advance in the face of heaviness in the steels and rails. Dealings ran around 1,400,000 for the full session.

LONDON STOCKS

LONDON, June 2—(CP)—Stock market prices continued to drift downward today, especially British funds and home rails. Trading remained quiet.

Industrial shares showed little change in balance while oils finished generally lower. Dividend paying Kaffirs advanced and development shares were quiet. Diamond issues ended unchanged.

Brazilian Traction shares advanced but other issues in the international list were quiet.

Wheat Futures Finish Higher

WINNIPEG, June 2—(CP)—Wheat futures closed ⅛ to ⅛ cent a bushel higher today on the Winnipeg grain exchange after a dull and featureless session. July finished at 99⅞ cents.

Scattered purchases came from southern houses, shippers, locals and mills. There was no export business in Canadian wheat or flour.

In the cash wheat market more than 500,000 bushels of No. 1 Northern and a small quantity of No. 3 Northern were taken by shippers.

Demand continued for oats and barley but only odd car lots were traded. Southern houses were interested in rye but few sales were reported. All oats and barley prices were bid at ceiling levels.

Country marketings for yesterday were 309,000 bushels, compared with 318,000 bushels a year ago.

Canadian Corps Group Endorses Amalgamation

Members of the Canadian Corps Association Tuesday night unanimously endorsed a motion urging federation of organizations of ex-service men and women to plan for their post-war welfare, at their regular meeting in the Masonic Temple. John Turner, president of the association, was in the chair.

"What we want," stated J. A. Davies, a member of the rehabilitation committee, in introducing the motion, "is a clearing house for our opinions, and we believe that a federation of the services, with their opinions is the answer. Such an organization can be achieved without losing our identity."

The resolution read as follows: "That we favor federation with any organization of ex-servicemen or women and auxiliary services or amalgamation of such organizations whose object is the future welfare of all ex-servicemen and women." Fred Windsor, an American visitor and V. L. Scott of the association, both spoke in favor of the motion.

Mr. Windsor, of St. Joseph, Missouri, now in residence here, is national commander of the Veterans of the Foreign Wars of the United States.

In speaking of his association, Mr. Windsor told the meeting that it was composed of men who had seen service in some war and originally included veterans of the Spanish-American war and the war of 1914-18. Although there are no branches in Canada, he said "I wouldn't be surprised if we have one here in 30 days."

READ SPEECH

Mr. Windsor read a speech he gave in Kansas City at a Memorial Day service last year, in honor of Memorial Day marked May 31 in the U.S.

At this final meeting of the season, the regimental band of the 2nd (Reserve) Battalion, Edmonton Regiment, under the leadership of Bandmaster Graydon Tipp, played a medley of marching and other popular songs. Cliff Wright played a trumpet solo. Music was also provided by the fife and bugle band of No. 12 Edmonton Squadron, Air Cadets of Canada under the direction of Tom Duguid and WO. Charles Stiles. The boys are recruited from sons of members of the Canadian Corps association.

J. Phizacklea, chairman of the Last Post committee, read the names of two late comrades, Alfred Hinson and John Coburn and a bugler sounded the Last Post.

Fusiliers Honor Departed Comrade

Fellow comrades from the 2nd (Reserve) Battalion, Edmonton Fusiliers as well as members of the bugle band which he trained so well, paid honor to the late Richard Rayner at the funeral services held Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Rayner died Sunday following a lengthy illness.

The funeral service was held in First Presbyterian church with the Rev. H. Douglas Stewart, minister of St. Andrew's church, officiating.

A guard of honor, composed of members of the Edmonton Fusiliers Bugle band was formed outside the church as the coffin was carried out.

At the graveside a bugle corps composed of Basil Josey, George Cashman, Gwen Williams and Leo McDonnell, all of the 2nd (Reserve) Battalion, Edmonton Fusiliers, sounded the Last Post and Reveille. The muffled drum was played by Jerry Josey, also of the Edmonton Fusiliers Bugle band.

Burial was made in the Edmonton Cemetery.

Howard and McBride funeral service was in charge of the arrangements.

The accident occurred at the Jasper avenue and 114 street intersection as Miss MacKinnon was crossing the avenue. She sustained a broken left leg, the limb being fractured in three places.

In addition to claiming $5,000 general damages she is seeking damages for loss of wages and for hospital and medical expenses incurred as a result of the accident.

Before The Magistrate

William Allen Latimer, charged with a breach of mobilization regulations, had his case adjourned.

Philip Edward Drader pleaded guilty to all of five charges of theft of automobiles, three of which were made by R.C.M.P., and the others by city police, and was sentenced to 18 months with hard labor on each, sentences to run concurrently. The court was told of his stealing a doctor's car at Lacombe, another car at Red Deer, a third at Ponoka. Two other charges, preferred against him earlier, concerned the stealing of two vehicles valued at $1,000 and $1,400 respectively. The car taken from Ponoka was located Sunday afternoon at the foot of McDougall hill.

The crown wondered whether the accused was trying to get out of the army. The accused, who said he had been in the army for three years was not trying to get out of it. He acknowledged a conviction in September, 1942, at Red Deer for theft of an auto license plate and stealing gas from trucks.

Two charges of dangerous driving were laid against Peter Pelechosky and Frank Cannon, together with a charge against the latter of operating an auto without the owner's consent. Pelechosky was fined $20 and costs or 30 days. He was involved in an accident on Tuesday at 109 street and 103 avenue, the court was told. Slight damage was done to another vehicle.

Cannon pleaded guilty to both his charges, and on the first count was fined $30 and costs or six weeks. For driving without the consent of the owner, he was assessed $50 and costs or three months. The accused, the court was told, took a car from 103 avenue about 8 p.m., May 31, becoming involved in an accident at 11.30 p.m., the same day. He was arrested as a result of the accident.

Florence Belcourt pleaded guilty to the charge of intoxication, acknowledged a previous offence, and was sentenced to three months with hard labor.

Two operators of billiard parlors appeared, charged with allowing on their premises persons under the age of 18, contrary to law. One case was adjourned, following a plea of not guilty, while in the second, Norman Baldwin pleaded guilty and was fined $10 and costs or 14 days. A boy of 14 years had been found on the latter's premises, detective evidence showed. The accused was told to keep his eyes open and not let boys sneak in. He said it was hard to tell the ages of all who came into the billiard hall.

Defeat Costs Japs 30,000 Casualties

By GEORGE WANG

Exclusive to The Edmonton Bulletin
Copyright, 1943, by British United Press

CHUNGKING, June 2.—The Japanese defeat in western Hupeh province cost the enemy 30,000 casualties and the victorious Chinese forces are pressing forward toward Ichang, major Yangtze river base, the national military council said today.

The statement said the 40th and 58th Japanese divisions had been thrown into the battle south of the Yangtze trying to rescue four other divisions, possibly 60,000 men.

Two of the divisions have been riddled with losses while the two others are threatened with encirclement.

The western Hupeh counter-attack that forced back Japanese spearheads not only strengthened the "gateway to Chungking" but opened the route to eventual victory, the council said.

The Bulletin's SPORT SHOW by Hal Dean

SPORTS EDITOR

PERHAPS living in the midst of it all tends to take some of the lustre off what is actually an unique situation, although it must be admitted a citizen would indeed be unobservant not to realize that right here in Edmonton and out "Alaska-way" changes are taking place with rather startling rapidity.

But evidently people elsewhere are talking and as stories usually lose little color through repetition, the pictures apparently being painted of this city and the area to the north and northwest at times outdo even the aurora borealis in it's most playful moods.

Bas O'Meara, of the Montreal Star, is one of those recently in contact with a "traveller" just returned and who must have unloaded quite a bundle for the edification of the eastern columnist.

300,000 IN TEN YEARS

SAYS Baz, "Just this morning, to be exact, we were talking to a man who travelled the Alcan highway from end to end, who tells us that at a spot we never heard about before named Dawson Creek, there are now about forty thousand people.

"He also says that in Edmonton you can't get a room any easier than you can get one in Halifax or Ottawa. He said that he wouldn't not be surprised if Edmonton goes to 300,000 in population ten years after the war is over.

"They will drop millions into that country in the next 25 years and there will be bigger cities even than Toronto . . . the place will be full of Americans who won't go back to their hum-drum life for love or money. Boy, they have everything up there—mountains, rivers, lakes, scenery like the Alps, hunting, fishing, flora and fauna, minerals, fish and fowl.

EDDIE SHORE'S TERRITORY

UPON a query from Baz as to "meatless days", the traveller retorted, "Why you can go shoot your next meal right off the spot where 25 years from now they will have streets longer than the Rue de Rumor.

"They will have big time hockey, at least Class AA baseball and I wouldn't be surprised if they get a team to end the long reign of the Blue Bombers. . . . yes, and if Lew Hayman hasn't his eye on the spot he's slipping.

"And we'll bet Eddie Shore has all the eligible kids up there on his negotiation list . . . it is his country. Out of Edmonton to Alaska should be his territory.

"You might see a ball league embracing spots as far as Alaska with a coast league hookup. Would it surprise too if sometime in the future Dawson City played hockey again perhaps for the Allan Cup this time?

"KEEP EYE ON EDMONTON"

IN conclusion, Baz adds on his own. "They might even have a horse racing circuit out there that would eventually rival the I.C.R.A. and perhaps even have dog racing. You know they went in for long dog races around there many years before anybody thought of the rabbit and the short dog races.

"Anyway, we wish you would meet the fellow we met up with. He made us realize that we were born twenty-five years too soon. Anyway keep your eye on Edmonton, you may yet see the western rush of 1910 to '12 repeated.

"They may even get those western newspapermen from Toronto back around the Rockies and then what would the C.P. do for its color stories? It is a bright prospect anyway you take it.

Harry Walker's Two-Run Homer in 12th Beats Dodgers 11-9

Cards Cut Brooklyn Lead to Half Game

Nine Pitchers On Parade as Rivals Battle

ST. LOUIS, June 2.—(AP)—St. Louis Cardinals and Brooklyn Dodgers grappled for 12 innings yesterday, in a wild baseball battle which the world champions won finally 11-9 on a two-run homer by Harry Walker.

The victory cut Brooklyn's National League lead to half a game. The rivals used nine pitchers and made a total of 35 hits, 20 of them by the Cardinals.

With one out in the 12th inning Lou Klein singled and Walker followed with a smash to the top of the rightfield pavilion to win the game.

Pitches Are Baffling

Rube Melton's Hurling is Standout of Major Leagues

NEW YORK, June 2.—Aptly named Reuben Melton has a gait that can only come from walking in the furrow freshly turned by the plow, and he's as heavy in the draught as the horse which pulls the blade on his native North Carolina farm land.

It's not that Reuben Franklin Melton isn't trying to run rapidly. He experiences difficulty coordinating the 205 pounds spread over his tremendous six-foot five-inch frame. The pitcher really works at it, but the speed is all in his mighty right arm. It is wasted when it gets to the valises that are his feet.

Melton has no more temperament than a Golden Guernsey. His pitches, deliberately or from habit, are interspersed with long pauses. Each movement is distinct. He kicks his cleats on the rubber, digs in the dirt in front of it, picks up the resin bag, throws it down, rubs the ball, gets the signal. Finally the pitch, and what a pitch.

OUTSTANDING SPEED

For sheer throwing, no pitcher has it on Melton. He is strong in general equipment. His hard one may be just a trifle shy of the hardest, his curve perhaps a trifle shy of the sharpest breaking, but few pitchers have come closer to excelling in both departments. He really has a quick downer.

Melton is a ringer for Flint Rhem —physically, mentally and in personality. Remember the Rhem who was "kidnapped" on the eve of the key series he was to open for the Cardinals at Ebberts Field in the fall of 1930?

Roughly speaking, the average curve is about half as fast as a swift pitch. Melton has a pronounced bulge in that his curve is thrown with about three-quarters of the velocity of his fast one. Batters can hardly tell his pitches apart.

BOUGHT FROM PHILLIES

Branch Rickey in December paid the Phillies $37,500 for Melton, a right-hander for whom he asked $50,000 as Cardinal property three years ago.

It was Melton whom Larry MacPhail, during the World Series of '40, had Gerry Nugent of the Phillies, who had first crack, draft from the Cardinals' Columbus branch for the Brooks. Nugent was to get $15,000, a profit of $7,500. Commissioner Landis heard about it, sentenced Melton to Philadelphia for three years, but gave him a year off for good behavior in view of Nugent's financial difficulties. Nugent collected $30,000 and Johnny Allen, and young Bill Cox, new owner of the Phillies, got $7,500 more when Allen refused to report.

Melton's trouble has been control, but he's a giant to beat when his curve is catching the corners. It might have been silly strategy for Leo Durocher to pitch him twice in four days this early in the going, but the Big Boy was ill this spring missed a great deal of training, needs the work, is built for it. He should be a whiz when he gets in shape.

Rube Melton, an oversized Ichabod Crane, is the new star of baseball.

187-Pound Tarpon Is New Record

NEW YORK, June 2.—Despite war restrictions on marine fishing, a 187-pound, seven-foot tarpon with a girth of three feet eight and a half inches who taken by Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel off Boca Grande Pass, Fla., for a 24-thread and women's all-tackle record, it is announced by the International Game Fish Association. Gaffed on 18-thread, the catch falls in the 24-thread class. Previous 24-thread tarpon records were made off the west coast of Africa.

11 Losses in Row This Year

Reds Just Can't Win Sundays

Manager Sewell Is Not Worrying Over His Browns

BOSTON, June 2—(AP)—For a major league manager who started the season with a club rated as a potential champion, Luke Sewell does not appear to be doing any worrying because his St. Louis Browns are holding up all the American League at this comparatively late stage.

Sewell, however, is downcast after the loss of Vern Stephens, his sensational shortstop, who left the club Monday to report to his Long Beach, Calif., draft board.

Sewell is far from convinced that he has a chronic second-division club on his hands. "Give any club in the league a streak and it will start bouncing high," he said.

Luke is in violent disagreement with most of the experts who blame the Browns' lowly ranking on his pitching staff's failures.

"Everybody appears to be worrying about my pitchers except me," he said. "They've been all right and they're going to continue so. The real trouble is that the club is not in shape and won't be for a couple of weeks."

Galento Wins In 25 Seconds

TAMPA, Fla., June 2—(AP)—Tony Galento, New Jersey heavyweight battler, last night knocked out Herby Katz, Brooklyn heavy, with a left to the chin within 25 seconds after the start of their scheduled 10-round main bout. Katz was knocked under the ropes and was counted out flat on his face.

Officials of the 116th Field Artillery Boxing Commission ordered purses of both fighters held up until an investigation could be made.

There are 15 species of American rattlesnakes, all poisonous.

CINCINNATI, June 2.—(AP)—William B. McKechnie had a look of bafflement yesterday as he shook his head and said:

"The least you can expect is to break even. Then we'd be at the top."

The lament came from a period of mourning extending back to last September 12, when the Deacon's Cincinnati Reds last won a Sunday game. That day they beat the Brooklyn Dodgers twice, knocking the latter out of the National League lead and killing their pennant hopes.

Since then, the Reds have lost 14 Sunday games and tied one, and 11 of the losses—all the Sunday games played so far this year—have blighted the Reds' early drive for another pennant.

Yet the figures make it clear—cross out the Sundays and the Reds are in first place and playing at a terrific pace in their league. That would give the Reds 17 games won and seven lost, or just break even as Manager McKechnie thought he had a right to do, and it would be about 22 and 12 or 13, close to what the league leading Dodgers are doing now.

"If we cancel our remaining Sunday games to save the team," commented travelling secretary Gabe Paul, "We'll go bankrupt. If we don't we'll go to the doghouse."

Cardinal Rookie Rates With Best

ST. LOUIS, June 2.—(AP)—Harry Brecheen of the Cardinals still is one of the National League's best rookie pitchers.

He has pitched 21 2/3 innings this season—18 against Brooklyn Dodgers and 3 2/3 against the Chicago Cubs. He has allowed just 10 hits and one run, struck out four, walked four men and made one wild pitch.

Yesterday he stopped the Dodgers in the final stages of a 12-inning fracas which the Cards won, 11-9. He received credit for the victory, giving up three hits and no runs in three frames of relief pitching.

GIRLS

"... And guess what happened, children?" "... Got married and lived happily ever after, just like ALL those fairy tales!"

IT IS these "wheels" for war workers, soldiers of industry, that you can help make go 'round.

If you have an unused "wheel" get it out and offer it for sale, through a C.C.M. dealer, so that some war worker can buy it and thus solve his transportation problem.

C.C.M. make most of the "wheels" used in Canada but just now we are very busy making munitions, and consequently very few "wheels"—that is why "wheels" are scarce. It is why we ask you to help "make the wheels go 'round" by offering for sale any unused "wheel" you may have.

Soon after victory we will again be making plenty of C.C.M. "wheels" resplendent with chrome plating, color enamel, gold and fancy striping. Till then, you can help us "make the wheels go 'round" by releasing any inactive bicycle in your household and getting it into active service by selling it to your C.C.M. dealer who will see that a war worker or other qualified person gets it.

In order that C.C.M. bicycles may be kept in good repair, C.C.M. are maintaining the best possible service on genuine C.C.M. parts and safety accessories by apportioning their available stocks to the 2,300 C.C.M. dealers across Canada. Every dealer gets his full quota in proportion to the parts available.

Bicycle Purchase Application forms may be filled in at any bicycle dealer's store.

C.C.M. COASTER BRAKE

An improved brake by C.C.M., fluxer in forward drive-action, more powerful in its smooth, quick stop than any of its predecessors. Built of super-strong, hardened steels to meet the needs of today's cyclists.

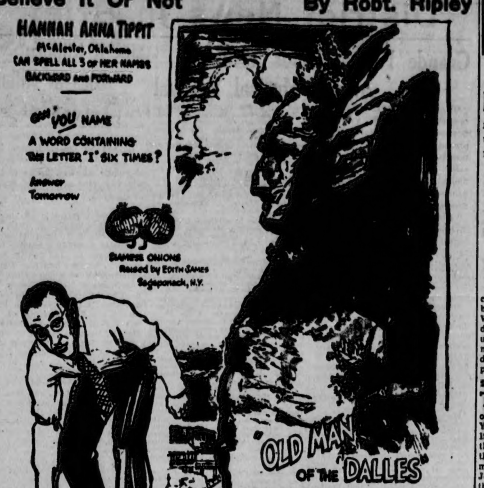

C.C.M. HANGER

The parts of this most important section of a C.C.M. bicycle are machined, hardened and finished with extreme accuracy so that you may get the most out of your pedalling action.

NEW YORK, June 2.—It was taken for granted before the season opened that this would be a year of surprises in the major leagues. Now the American League has furnished an unexpectedly big jolt by developing its tightest pennant race since 1922.

War calls, the different ball, unlooked-for injuries and various reasons have levelled off competition to a certain extent, but the surprisingly-strong pressure from below in the American League has created a virtual precedent-shattering situation whereby the St. Louis Browns, in last place, are only 6½ games away from the first-place New York Yankees.

Teams that were barely given a chance to win a respectable number of games particularly the Washington Senators and Philadelphia Athletics have tightened up the junior loop campaign to a marked degree and give no evidence of slackening their inspired play.

SENATORS ARE SURPRISE

THE Senators have won 20, lost 16 and hold down second place, only one game away from the Yankees while the Athletics, with 19 victories and 18 defeats, are in third. The A's have won eight of their last 12 games and have the most talked-of newcomer in rookie Jess Flores, Mexico's donation to the majors. He won seven games in a row to top both leagues after dropping his first start on to the Boston Red Sox by a single run.

Washington has been equally as refreshing, winning six of its last nine starts, despite the fact that the team hasn't been hitting a lick. Pitching has keynoted the Senators' surge, Alex Carrasquel, a Venezuelan, sparking the rise with six triumphs against only one defeat.

One-run decisions have speckled the American League calendar more often than in any season since slugging became the rule rather than the exception and extra inning battles have become a regular occurrence. A total of 27 contests have gone over the regulation nine-inning route.

BROWNS DISAPPOINTING

BIGGEST disappointments have been the St. Louis Browns and the Boston Red Sox. Figured to be definite trouble-makers, the Browns have won only 11 while losing 18, but still are only 6½ games away from the top, a margin small enough to overcome with a little spirit. The Red Sox, riddled by the draft, which took away most of their batting power, were expected to get pitching at least. But the hurling has not held up for Manager Joe Cronin and his club has lost 19 while winning 17.

Perhaps the biggest single factor in the tight race is the performance of the Yankees. We left that until last because somebody is always singling out the Yankees as the main reason for this or the big alibi for that. Nevertheless, the fact that the Bronx Bombers are anything but lethal and that their infield no longer has the finesse that made it the best double-play machine in the majors has helped tighten up the race.

Pitching, however, has been their chief headache. As an indication of Manager Joe McCarthy's mound difficulties look at Johnny Murphy's record. The New York relief ace has already appeared in 11 relief roles.

At this stage, the Yankees are still on top but the man who can pick the team that will be there at the end of September is a better prophet than we are—which isn't saying much at that.

List of N.H.L. Players in Services Greatly Increased

By CHARLES EDWARDS

TORONTO, June 2.—(CP)—The National Hockey League last fall issued a list of 80 N.H.L. players who had joined the armed forces. The list contained names of some who had never played in the big time, were merely on reserve lists, but nevertheless it was obvious that hockey's major league had contributed a good share to the fighting services.

And hockey players are still doing their bit. Study of last season's line-ups shows at least 27 men who played in the N.H.L. at one time or another in the 1942-43 campaign, have since enlisted. This list, though not guaranteed complete, is still impressive:

Toronto: Bobby Copp, Rhys Thompson, Bud Polle, Bill Taylor, Gaye Stewart, Buck Jones, Shep Mayer.

Chicago: Max Bentley, Johnny Gottselig, Red Hamill, Doug Stevenson, Audley Tulen, Wingy Johnston.

New York: Lin Bend, Scotty Cameron, Alf Pike, Joe Bell, Hub Macey.

Detroit: Sid Abel, Jack Stewart, Harry Watson, Johnny Holota.

Montreal: Tony Demers, Cliff Goupille, Terry Reardon.

Boston: John Shewchuk, Bill Shill.

Just Au Revoir

Fort William has lost its rink for the duration, its sons have enlisted and sport there is slumbering. But, says Freddy Edwards of the Fort William Times-Journal, there'll come a day. He writes: "Out of major competition in sport now until after the war, this city ranked among the leading sporting centres of the country, is concentrating upon the development of its youth with a greater zeal than ever before in its history. . . . Plenty of evidence of this will be no doubt forthcoming in years to come when Fort William re-enters the lists for Dominion championships."

No Further Comment

Toronto Star: "Johnny Grace's many handlers, advisers, well-wishers, managers and Mike Jacobs have finally fixed him but good. He meets Bob Montgomery on June 15."

Civil Servants To Get Bonuses

OTTAWA, June 2.—(CP)—Four changes in regulations relating to payment of civil servants were announced by the treasury board yesterday. They are:

1—"War duties supplements" may now be paid to non-war department employees whose duties have increased by reason of the war.

2—The salary ceiling for receipt of the cost-of-living bonus is raised from $2,100 to $3,000.

3—Payment of a two-months' salary gratuity to the widow on the death of a civil servant, discontinued for personnel in the fighting services, is restored.

4—Grade one employees who start at $60 and are raised to $65 after six months service now may be raised to $70 after an additional 12 months' service.

Incidentally

The civic shindig celebrating Ottawa Commandos' Allan Cup victory will be held in the Ottawa auditorium June 9. It will be open to the public with a dance and floor show. Commandos will receive their gifts from the stage. . . . Wartime is no time for profit-making in sport. The Kelowna, B.C. aquatic association recognized that when it decided to give net proceeds of the annual regatta to the Dominion government for the second straight year.

CALGARY, June 2.—(CP)—Alberta appeal court yesterday dismissed the appeal of Fred Paskuski, Lethbridge, against conviction and sentence to two years less one day on a charge of receiving stolen auto tires.

Dahlgren Leading National Hitters

NEW YORK, June 2.—(AP)—Babe Dahlgren yesterday had reason to laugh heartily at the numerous clubs which kept passing him down the line as a poor risk. Babe, now playing first base for the Philadelphia Phils, leads the National League in hitting with .368.

Billy Herman, Brooklyn Dodger infielder, slipped from first to third as his average slipped from .356 to .338. Ahead of him, in addition to Dahlgren, is young Stan Musial of the St. Louis Cardinals with a .345 mark.

Vern Stephens' Lead in American Over 40 Points

CHICAGO, June 2.—(AP)—Another reigning American league hitting leader is on the verge of shellacking, and a midsummer free-for-all among the crown princes is in store.

This time it's Vern Stephens, the St. Louis Browns' shortstop outfielder, who has departed for the army while pacing the other league hitters by a solid 46 points. His average was .378.

Last time Ted Williams of the Boston Red Sox finished as the American league champion with a .356 average and promptly went into the service.

Principal contenders through Monday's games are Oris Hockett, Cleveland, Johnny Lindell, New York and Pinky Higgins and Dick Wakefield, Detroit Tigers. They're the only men over the .300 mark. Hockett is hitting .330, Higgins .319, Lindell .316 and Wakefield .315.

O'Neill Protests Athletic Victory

PHILADELPHIA, June 2.—(AP)—Steve O'Neill, Detroit Tigers' manager, protested yesterday the Philadelphia Athletics' victory over the Tigers in the second game of a doubleheader Monday, saying that "dead balls" were used and that "it might or might not have been an accident."

The protest was made by wire and letter to President William Harridge of the American League.

Manager Connie Mack of the A's said, "It is poor sportsmanship on the part of Mr. O'Neill to protest the game," because "if dead balls were used it would be a mistake of the umpire."

Detroit won the first game 7-1, and lost the second 4-3.

We Can Win This War

INSTALMENT IV.

The Lesson of Guadalcanal

The whole question of "effective strength" is well illustrated by the operations around Guadalcanal. Here, in a series of land, sea, and air battles of maximum intensity, the theory and practice of the warfare of insufficient means have been displayed, as it were, in miniature, demonstrating conclusively the utter futility of the so-called global strategy.

Foch says somewhere, "On ne transporte pas la troupe, seulement pour la transportation". Or, in a very free translation, "The mere shifting about of armed forces over the earth's surface does not necessarily improve the chances of victory."

In other words, whether we move ships or men and guns around the Pacific, opening up a second front against the Japs in the Solomon Islands, or whether we move them merely across the British Channel to harrass the Germans at Dieppe, the result is always going to be the same unless we conduct our operations in accordance with a certain strategic idea—that is, unless we have it in our power to effect a superior convergence of forces against a decisive strategic objective.

WILD-GOOSE CHASE

Now Guadalcanal — the great commando raid of the Pacific—was a strategic wild-goose chase from the start, simply because whatever force we sent out, and no matter how bravely or skillfully we used what we sent in a tactical sense, the Japs could always, by reason of their more favorable disposition of forces in the Pacific area, tip the balance against us in a strategic sense. And this would still be true even if, after taking Guadalcanal, we went on to take Rabaul and from there continued our expensive "island hopping" straight through the Southwest Pacific.

For strategy means depth, forces within the theatre, available for immediate employment at the critical point at the critical time. Strategy is interested in only one thing—the determination of the direction which will make the main effort decisive. And by the same token, strategy is only interested in that objective which will prove, when achieved, to have been decisive. Strategy does not expend its tactical capital on accounts of victory like the taking of Guadalcanal, which are bound to fall of their own weight when the mass of the enemy has been defeated.

NO STRATEGIC VALUE

At Guadalcanal, the same strategical lesson was taught as at Manila or Singapore or Burma, Rangoon or Java, to wit: it is impossible to win an all-out strategic victory without effective strength in the theatre of operations.

It may be possible at ruinous cost to take terrain from the enemy, as Guadalcanal was taken. It may be possible at ruinous cost to hold for a while terrain already occupied, as Singapore and Manila were held. But in the end you will suffer a strategic failure. Because your action lacks strategic depth, and lacking strategic depth cannot have an effective strategic direction, it is doomed to be ineffectual, and sooner or later will turn out to have had no more influence on the winning of the war than a large-scale commando raid. In fact, as I said above, that is exactly what Guadalcanal was.

It makes no difference that at Dieppe, for example, the British and Canadians maintained themselves for only eight hours, while at Guadalcanal the Americans won a hard-fought tactical victory after seven months of heroic fighting. The one was as inconclusive, as utterly wasteful of men and munitions of war as the other. Each had a false strategic direction, each sought an objective that had no strategic value. Both were lacking in effective means.

But it is right here that global warfare as it is now conceived fails to be decisive, and places the fullest opportunity for final victory in the hands of the enemy. If you can picture a blindfolded man armed with a blunt instrument thrashing around a dark wood in search of some mythical animal that never existed, you can get a pretty good idea of the way global strategy works. In this frame of reference anything goes.

POOR STRATEGY

For, observe! What was poor strategy in its conception (the taking and holding of Guadalcanal) will not have advanced by a fractional millimeter the United Nations' cause in Europe); what was poor strategy in its execution (examine the list of lost ships in this Gascons' graveyard of the Pacific); what was poor strategy as regards a decisive result in the western theatre (mark sero here) is immediately whitewashed and presented as a master stroke of war by the whole expedient of applying the conception of global strategy.

We are told that "Japan was about to launch an offensive against Russia through Siberia, and was prevented by the erosion of Japanese forces at Guadalcanal"; or "Japan was mobilizing a fresh army against China, and Chiang-Kai-shek was given a new lease on life due to the losses inflicted at Guadalcanal"; or "the invasion of India had been postponed indefinitely due to the forced drainage of the Japanese war effort into this obscure and relatively unimportant war theatre."

DIVERSION SCHEME

There is no earthly reason to suppose that the Guadalcanal adventure had any appreciable effect on the Japanese plan of operations. There was no reason to suppose that everything the Japanese did there, every ship and man and plane they lost there, was not willingly, gladly, and intelligently expended in furthering the main strategic objective of the Japanese in the Pacific: the reflecting of American power away from the decisive European theatre.

Here, then, is the lesson of Guadalcanal, and, as I have said before, it is exactly the same as the lesson of Manila and Singapore. I wish I could think that even now we have learned it.

It is my guess that this diversion of American power from a vitally strategic theatre, this turning of a comparatively unimportant area into a battleground on the first order, is the only plausible or possible explanation of Japan's apparent determination to evict the Americans from the Solomon Islands at all cost.

For if America could be induced to hold up the opening of a second front in Europe until the spring of 1943, thus allowing Hitler the chance to hold the Donetz Basin and set up his objective line of war material, any Japanese losses would be gain.

And this brings up another point that must be given careful consideration before the lesson of Guadalcanal is thoroughly learned.

FLUID AND MOBILE

There has been of late a great deal of mystifying muttering among our Delphian strategists on the radio concerning what one columnist calls "Japan's inexplicable inaction" on the various fronts where, according to our global strategists, her armies should now be launching vigorous offensives. Now I would suppose had to suppose that there may be a very good reason for this—that the Japanese army is being held fluid and mobile, together with her fleet and air forces, to be sent wherever they may be employed in taking the fullest advantage of our global strategy.

Might it be suggested that the real strategic objective of Japan is the deflection of the American strength in the Pacific until Hitler is strong enough to take on a full-dress American attack in the Atlantic theatre?

For it may well be that the Japanese holders of power, seeing that the ultimate victory of Japan in the Pacific is wholly dependent on the ultimate victory of Hitler in the Atlantic, that any advance made by Japan is conditional, and any territory taken by Japan is contingent on the success or failure of the German armies in Europe, have simply been employing this nation in their conduct of the war, cashing this concept, so to speak, in the golden coin of strategy.

We can only say these things may be, and no one can be certain of them.

LOGICAL STRATEGY

But of one thing we can be certain, to wit: it is exactly such a policy that Japan should employ if she is determined not merely upon local tactical successes but upon winning the war. What I mean is that, having made herself secure within her island corsair's nest, and having seized every outpost of the enemy that threatened her continental supremacy in Asia, she would set about doing whatever lay in her power to remove anything that threatened the continental supremacy of her German ally on the other side of the world.

She would feint at the Aleutians, make a pass at Australia, mass troops on the Siberian border, dispute the presence of the American marines on Guadalcanal, as vehemently as if her national existence were at stake, and all this in order to encourage Americans to do what they so earnestly wanted to do—that is, "Slap the Jap."

Now in this war it should be adopted as a general maxim that one should always take the hardest way. In anything, any course of action that seems easy, that promises immediate results, that satisfies immediate needs or reds, prejudices; anything one wants to do very badly, the advice is to be followed to "don't do it". This inexactly what the enemy wants you to do.

BRISTLES WITH DANGER

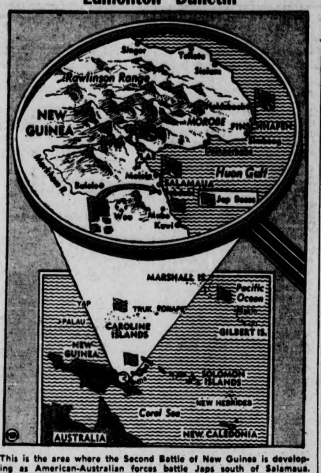

On the other hand, whatever seems difficult, is in opposition to our fondest desires, and has a long range rather than an immediate advantage, is beset with risk and bristles with danger—concerning such tasks we should obey Nelson's motto, "Delay not an instant". For this is exactly what the enemy does not want us to do.

With these precepts in mind, let us turn now from the Pacific to the Atlantic theatre and consider from every possible angle the only real problem that confronts us in this war—the defeat of Adolf Hitler.

Technical School Will Close June 30 'Til After War

Trustees Are Unanimous Decision Lease Building For Use of War Services

Closing of the Edmonton Technical School as from June 30 and the turning over of its facilities to the War Emergency Training Services for the duration of the war and at least six months after hostilities cease, was approved by members of the Edmonton School Board at a meeting held in the Civic Block Tuesday night. In the chair was M. M. Downey. Part time use of the building and equipment has already been made by the training services.

Outlines Plans

M. M. Downey, chairman of the Edmonton School Board who told members at a meeting Tuesday night in the Civic Block that the board had in mind a much larger and better technical school for Edmonton immediately after the war. Although stating he was speaking personally only, Mr. Downey said that the change from a poor to a new building must take place immediately after the war. His statement came as board members decided to close the Edmonton Technical school and turn it over to the War Emergency Training Services June 30.

The recommendation, submitted to the board by the chairman of the finance committee, R. L. Sutherland, passed the board without a dissenting vote, and only opposition to the proposal came from representatives of the Edmonton Teachers' Association.

Although he emphasized that he was speaking only personally, Mr. Downey stated that the board had in mind the resumption of technical education in a much larger and better school. This move, he pointed out, would not be made six months after the cessation of hostilities nor a year, but immediately after the war had stopped.

The present technical school was not at all what it should be for a city the size of Edmonton, and the shifting of the technical school from a poor to a new and up-to-date building must be made.

EQUIPMENT VALUE

Valuation of the equipment to be left in the building had been set at $45,000, Mr. Sutherland told board members. With the War Emergency Training Services paying 10 per cent a year of the value of the equipment, the sum of $4,500 there-

R. L. Sutherland, chairman of the finance committee of the Edmonton School Board who submitted the recommendation that the Edmonton Technical school be closed as such and turned over to the War Emergency Training Services for instruction of army trainees for the duration of the war and for a period of at least six months after hostilities cease. Mr. Sutherland stated that a serious decrease in enrolment and an increase in the per-pupil cost justified the discontinuance of the school for the time being.

Because the weather between Edmonton and Fairbanks was a bit thick Tuesday, Edmonton missed welcoming one of the most important messenger "boys" in history. Joseph E. Davies, President Roosevelt's special emissary to Joseph Stalin of Russia, returning from his mission to Moscow, was in Fairbanks, Alaska, Tuesday morning.

It seemed almost certain Mr. Davies would fly to Washington by way of Whitehorse and Edmonton, but something that doesn't often happen prevented the party using the northwest route. The weather was wet and misty on the inside passage and clear along the coast. It is usually the other way round. So the messenger "boy" from Moscow flew south to Seattle.

Davies is said to be bringing a reply to President Roosevelt's secret letter to Stalin. Washington to Moscow is a few hours by

Man Is Stabbed In City Hotel

R. V. McFadgin, injured about the head in a stabbing affray at 11:30 p.m. Tuesday evening in an Edmonton hotel, was taken to General hospital where several stitches were required to close the wound. McFadgin, it was reported by police, was stabbed during a quarrel in the hotel room occupied by a man named Laury Omeras.

Witness to the attack was A. Brown, a roomer from another hotel, who was one of a party, police officers stated.

McFadgin, although injured, was able to call a taxi and made the trip to the hospital unattended.

McFadgin, who spent the night in hospital, was allowed to leave Wednesday morning, hospital authorities stated.

THE QUESTION

Do you think the weather abnormally cool for this time of year?

THE ANSWERS

J. L. PUGH, salesman: No. In my recollection it never really warm here until the end of June. The rain has been responsible for much of the so-called cold weather here, but really it hasn't been too bad at all.

M. JACKSON, student: It is cooler now than last year, I think. But it will be warm soon, and we'll wish we had some of the cool weather back again.

H. MAYSE, clerk: The weather here never seems to be the same two years running. Last year, though, I think it was worse for gardens than it was this year. While we have had a lot of cold rain this year, last year there was a heavy frost on May 24, and a lot of gardeners' efforts were ruined. So it can't be too bad this year.

Attempted Theft Draws Two Months

Roy Elmer Larson, air force recruit, will spend two months in Fort Saskatchewan jail for the attempted theft of $3.56 in currency and 24 cents in stamps from the cash register of a 101 street cafe on May 9 last.

Charged with breaking and entering the cafe the accused was found guilty in supreme court Wednesday by Mr. Justice C. C. McLaurin on the lesser offence of attempted theft, and was sentenced to serve two months in jail to date from the date of his arrest on May 9.

The police were called to the cafe by an employee of the Royal George Cafe, who saw Larson prowling about in the premises. When the police arrived they found the accused hiding under a table.

Counsel for the accused submitted that he was under the influence of liquor and was not capable of knowing the nature of his crime.

Passing sentence Mr. Justice McLaurin said that "undoubtedly the accused was influenced to a degree by his intoxicated condition but its degree was not such that he had no knowledge of the nature of his act."

11 Horses, Cow Are Destroyed In Two-Alarm Fire

Eleven horses and a cow were burned to death in a two-alarm fire which destroyed the barn of Canadian 4-X Bakeries, 112 street and 103 avenue, Tuesday night. Also destroyed in the blaze causing a loss of thousands of dollars were 12 tons of hay, 250 bushels of oats, 12 sets of harness. The interior of the building, a partial brick and metal structure, was a total loss.

The fire was first noticed by two bakers at work, when they smelled smoke. They were F. Westgate and Frank Hrochuk, who opened the door of the barn to find it in flames. They notified Miss Betty Gilmore, an office employee of the company, who turned in an alarm.

Wesgate and Hrochuk stated they had opened the door of the barn in an effort to release the horses and the cow inside, but the flames had got such a hold, they could not enter the place. D. McLennan, shop foreman, told authorities he believed there to be 11 or 12 horses in the building. About 2:30 a.m. Wednesday day Hefflick, barn boss, who could not be located at his home at 10326 112 street, at the outbreak of the fire, was interviewed and stated there were only 11 horses and a cow in the barn.

DID NOT SPREAD

The barn, 24 by 90 feet, was located about 100 feet north and east of the rear of the bakery. The fire was confined to it.

Cecil A. Blair, 10997 123 street, manager of Canadian Bakeries, was ill at his home.

D. McLennan, shop foreman, stated the barn was covered by insurance, and while property damage was unestimated, the average cost of the horses destroyed ran about $100 a head, he said.

WAS "IN ORDER"

Hefflick told authorities that he was last in the barn about 7.30 p.m. when everything was in order. Ewen Monroe, 10321 112 street, whose home is next to the bakery, said he had put his auto in the garage across the lane from the barn at 9.25 p.m., at which time there was no sign of smoke or fire.

Stalls 2 and 8, under Fire Chief J. McGregor, responded to the call, using three lines of hose.

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Love of Middle-Age Good Marriage Risk

Hearts Develop Just as Surely as Muscles, Brains Reach Maturity After Youth Passes, and Older People Know Better Their Own Minds

DEAR MISS DIX: For twenty-six years I endured a loveless marriage. Then my husband died and for two years I have been a widow. Now I have met a man whom I love very much who wants me to marry him. We are both in our forties. Do you think a love at this age is a safe gamble? It has been said that there is no love like the first love, and do you think a man in his forties is capable of being in love with a woman and making her happy?

We are very congenial and are happy when we are together and miss each other terribly when we are apart. Is there such a thing as a deep middle-age love?

PUZZLED.

Answer: I certainly do. I think that the love of a middle-aged couple, who find in each other their hearts' desire, is like "sunlight unto moonlight, or water unto wine," compared to any boy and girl emotion. The poets and the novelists, who are poor guides in the practical affairs of life, have glorified young love and first love until they have sold us the idea that it is only the very young who are capable of the great passion, but nothing is less true. Hearts have to develop as well as muscles and brains, and it is not until they reach maturity that they are fit for the kind of love that lasts.

Adolescent love changes with every phase of growth. The boys and girls who thought they could not live without each other one day are bored to death with each other the next day, and have found new objects of adoration the third. And when they marry and take upon themselves responsibilities that their young shoulders are not able to bear, oftener than not they lose their taste for each other, and the marriage ends in divorce. Statistics show that the proportion of divorces is far greater among the young than in any other age class. And I can testify that I rarely get a letter telling of an unhappy marriage than does not begin: "I married too early."

And as for there being no love like our first love, I wonder how many of us, after meeting our first love again after a lapse of years, haven't thanked God for saving us from having married her or her. There is no more disillusioning experience.

So I think that when a couple in their forties fall in love with each other that they are a preferred matrimonial risk so far as happiness is concerned. They are still young enough not to have kissed romance good-bye, and they are old enough to know how to value love and to take every precaution to keep it alive. Also, they have had enough experience with life to be judges of men and women and hence to be good pickers. For they select their mates not only with their hearts, but their heads.

NO REAL LOVER

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a girl in my teens and have a boy friend in the service. We intend to be engaged and marry after the war is over. I love him very much, but he insists upon my living with him before we are married, and that I cannot bring myself to do.

We argue over that every time he comes to see me, which is several times a month as he is stationed not far from where I live. He tells me that if I loved him the way he loves me nothing would seem wrong. I don't think that way, so please tell me what to do.

X

Answer: You might tell your boy friend that if he really loved you he would not ask you to do a thing that would dishonor and degrade you even in his own sight. A man who truly loves a woman does not want to drag her down to the level of the women of the streets. He wants to put her on a pinnacle and protect her even from himself.

Consider how selfish and unjust this boy is being to you in trying to persuade you to become his mistress. He is asking you to risk your whole life's happiness and wellbeing just to gratify him. You are not even engaged to him. You have not the slightest hold or claim upon him. He is going away very soon, to be gone a long time. It is just a chance whether his fancy for you will endure over distance and absence and meeting new people, seeing new women, and the changes that will take place in himself. Now he is an unformed boy, but he will come back from the war a mature man. He may not want you then. You may not want him.

It will make a lot of difference to you then whether you are a girl who has kept her skirts clean, who has lived up to her principles, who has her own self-respect because she has a good record, and who has no shameful secret that she lives in dread of people finding out.

Thousands upon thousands of boys who are leaving for the front have said the same things to their girls that this boy is saying to you, and they have listened to them and to their own hearts. And now the boys are gone and the girls are crawling back to the homes they have disgraced to bear their fatherless babies.

Have the courage to stand by your colors and do what you know to be right. Your boy friend will respect you for it and be far more apt to come back and marry you than he would if you do what he asks of you.

NO ONIONS!

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: A gentleman roomer in our home, whose friendship and opinion my sister and I greatly value, has in very polite but unmistakable language told my sister that a teacher in music has no right in public should not indulge herself in eating uncooked green onions, nor food seasoned with garlic. What do you think about this?

A TEACHER.

Answer: If you and sister ever expect to be kissed would urge you to take the gentleman's advice. Certainly a garlicky and oniony breath would be a chaperon that would keep any date at a distance from even Miss America.

Many a girl who wonders why the eligible youth who called once never called again might find the answer in what she ate for dinner. For true love can take a lot of weakness, but it takes the count when it is confronted with odors that seem to come off of the garbage pile instead of a bank of roses.

The words which you say to yourself while thinking have a profound effect upon you. When you are thinking you are carrying on what might be compared to a "talking picture" run off by the mind.

Your thinking is done in a series of pictures, which pictures are brought into the mind by words with which you are familiar. What you are depends to a large extent upon the kind of mental talking pictures which you edit forth.

The person who is constantly holding before the mind certain disease conditions suggested by words describing diseases should not be surprised when these unhealthy words are reflected in an unhealthy physical condition. Some of the words most familiar to you are words having to do with disease, all of which call up pictures of unpleasant conditions. You will identify the pictures according to the words you use.

For example, "Tonsilitis" brings up a certain kind of picture, and "stroke" a totally different picture. "Weak" brings up a certain kind of a picture, "strong" brings up an entirely different picture, which is the direct opposite.

The memory part of the mind or the unconscious phase, can think only with whatever material it has been given during past experience. The more you dwell upon unpleasant pictures the stronger you make the tendency to express unpleasantness. Moreover the more you dwell upon the pleasant pictures through using words which call them forth, the stronger you make the tendency to express pleasantness.

The sum total of your mental powers depends largely upon the kind of pictures you evoke most frequently. The common sense thing to do is to be careful to use good words with which to direct the mental processes along the line of wholesome talking pictures. Cultivate those words which call to mind pictures of yourself as being strong and healthy. Build yourself a wealth of good mental talkies which will help you to express that state which we call health.

Learn to dwell upon, again and again, such words as health, vigor, strength, power, and so on. Vitality is a good word to think about. These constructive words will have a great deal of power over you.

Many a man has killed himself into sickness and failure when it would have been just as easy to talk himself into success and health. All the men and women who have been outstanding successes have known how to talk to themselves. Perhaps they did not understand the process but it worked for them just the same without their understanding it. Through happy accident, they formed the habit of using positive words calling forth positive pictures and these words became a kind of magic for them which made them confident and serene.

Find good words for yourself and keep on dwelling upon them until you get the positive benefits which will follow.

All questions regarding health and diet will be answered. Large, stamped, self-addressed envelope must be enclosed. Write on one side of paper only. Letters must not exceed 200 words. Address McCoy Health Service, The McCoy Building, 1151 West 6th Street, Los Angeles, Calif.

Points for Parents

By EDYTH THOMAS WALLACE

Mother: "We're so glad to have you here, David. Johnnie decided you were the one boy he wanted to share his birthday dinner with him."

Children: "Surprise, surprise!" Mother: "Say hello to the children, Son. Don't be so shy! They have come to your birthday party. Aren't you glad to see them?"

Help a shy child become friendly with single individuals before expecting him to adjust to larger groups.

Your Baby And Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

When a child grows and thrives and is healthy, comfortable and active on his diet given her, then one cannot consider the lack of a daily bowel movement to be anything of great significance.

I know the idea of a daily movement is so ingrained as to be almost impossible of eradication. But, it ought to be pretty obvious that if the child has all the proper foods, plenty of roughage to stimulate bowel activity and is and always has been "constipated" in the sense of no "daily" movement, it must be a personal habit.

Even babies differ greatly in the number of bowel movements daily, and some perfectly well babies regularly go 48 or even 72 hours without a movement and then show no indication of a constipated stool.

This, of course, is a nursing baby, for bottle babies can have their formulas so adjusted that eventually there will be a bowel movement daily.

Mrs. A.R. says, "We have had trouble with our daughter since she was born. She eats well but we have always had to give her something to force a bowel movement.

"No matter how much we do for this—and how it takes so much to result in an elimination—she never has a normal movement without it. This has me quite worried. In every other way she is very healthy. She is 15 months old, weighs 26 pounds and is sturdy. We give her raw and cooked fruits and plenty of vegetables. Will you please give us your advice? I wrote you before and hope this time my letter will be published."

I feel sorry when I hear that anything has gone wrong with a letter. I suppose one must expect this when one gets thousands weekly.

It may be if you would be patient about waiting until nature acts of its own accord, inevitably the child would establish some kind of rhythm of evacuation which would be natural to her.

The use of laxatives force an unnatural evacuation and when there will be constipation until the intestines have a collection of refuse sufficient to stimulate a movement.

Give the child an opportunity to establish a good habit by putting her on the toilet (a low stool is best) about twenty minutes after a meal. Even if she is not successful, eventually she will be and a regular hour for evacuation is in itself a good habit.

Be sure the diet contains whole grain foods. Wheat germ daily, or yeast, plus all kinds of vegetables and fruits, both cooked and raw and plenty of milk, meat, eggs, cheese and fowl ought to insure a diet that, allied with patience and regularity, should prevent any necessity for laxatives.

Our leaflet "Types of Stools" discusses constipation and foods and formulas which are most laxative in their influence. It may be had by sending a 4-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

What To Do

In small quarters one of the most needed, and usually most lacking items, is good storage space.

Every home, apartment or single room affords good opportunity for built-in closets, drawer space and bookshelves, so if you want to have more space, here's a suggestion.

An overhead luggage room in your closet hides all the suitcases successfully. Two shelves are built at door height and a light board is fitted between them so it may be lifted from either side.

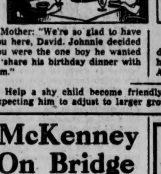

If you have a radiator under a window, combine radiator cover with a pair of useful cupboards on either side. These give you much needed storage space for small articles and even for linens.

McKenney On Bridge

This is the third of a series of six articles showing a technique of play known as false-carding. This series will prove beneficial to expert and beginner alike.

By WILLIAM E. McKENNEY
Americas Card Authority

Here is a false-card play that is overlooked even by the expert. Of course the declarer has no problem at all if the adverse spades are divided three-two. His first play is to lead the three of spades from his own hand (South) and win in dummy with the queen. The careless player will put on the four-spot from the East hand. But East must try to prevent the declarer from winning the king from dummy, because West will show out, and then declarer could lead the ten-spot, take the finesse and lose no spade tricks.

If East play the eight-spot on the queen, declarer will decide that if there are four spades in one hand against him, they certainly are not in the East hand. He will lead the five-spot from dummy—and now, should he play the nine-spot from his own hand, or go up with the ace? I can tell you that practically every declarer will go up with the ace, and then find it impossible to prevent East from making a trick with his jack of spades.

Minute Make-Ups

Go glamorous when you go offduty! After your wartime efficiency clothes it's a welcome change to wear feminine things; gay hats, your most natural makeup. The topping off your manicure with the new off-duty polish shade, designed to put you in the mood for fun. It's a deep, rich red, the kind that makes your hands look whiter—a good point to remember if war work leaves your hands not quite so white and smooth as in the old days!

Debunker

According to reconstructions of this tower, by archaeologists, after extensive excavations and authentic measurements, the tower of Babel was less than one-fourth as high as the Empire State Building in New York. The tower was about 300 feet high, and was equally as large by each dimension at the base. This data was secured from the Oriental Society which excavated the ruins of the Tower of Babel in the heart of Babylon.

War Kitchen

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

Here's down-to-earth food news—you can find many wild greens that are good to eat in fields, vacant lots, along roadsides, in streams and in woods. Call them weeds, if you want. But such wildgreens as dandelions, plantain, wild chicory and the like make tender salads and also can be cooked as vegetables. They are rich in vitamins and minerals and of course are free as the open spaces where they grow.

Know your greens before you eat them. Never serve any wild greens unless you know they are safe. Ask the Department of Agriculture or your local state college of agriculture to identify it if you are not certain.

Cook greens as soon as possible after gathering. Pick over carefully, discard wilted parts and trim off roots. Wash thoroughly in several waters. But don't soak them in water. Cook in very little salted water for a brief time only.

You get more vitamins when you serve wild greens raw in salads. Try combining shredded young dandelion greens, an onion finely chopped, a few radishes sliced thin, and French dressing.

Dandelions—For the tenderest greens, cut leaves before the yellow blossom comes. Cut the tooth-edged leaves at the root crown.

Lamb's quarters—Wild spinach is another name. Some consider the flavor more delicate than that of garden spinach. Goosefoot is still another name, because of the jagged shape of the leaf. You will find this a common weed "at home" in rich garden patches or in potato fields.

Plantain—This familiar heavyleafed weed hugs the ground almost as close as the dandelion and must be dug up in the same way. Pick only young, tender leaves. Crisped and shredded, they made good combiners for salads.

Wild chicory — For eating purposes, hunt the wild chicory long before the blue flower appears. The rosette of root leaves may be cooked, or the tender shoots and leaves be used raw in salads.

The juice or pot liquor in which wild greens have been cooked hold vitamins and minerals. Save and serve on the greens, or use in sauces and soups.

Tomorrow's Menu

(Eat the Basic 7 Every Day)

Breakfast—Blackberries, top milk, French toast, honey or jam, coffee, milk.

Luncheon—Tomatoes stuffed with cottage cheese and chopped raw vegetables, buttered wholewheat toast, sugarless cup cakes with honey frosting, tea, milk.

Dinner—Kidney bean or corn bread made with clarified drippings, buttered wild greens, raw carrot strips, old-fashioned strawberry shortcake, tea, milk.

My Day

BY ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, — Yesterday afternoon, I took a street car to get to the Social Security building, where I was to speak at a forum at 4 o'clock. I had barely seated myself in the car when a rather breathless voice behind me said: "You are Mrs. Roosevelt, aren't you?"

Turning around, I saw a pretty young girl and, after I admitted that I was myself, she told me she was on her way to see her brother at a southern camp and had stopped off for the day in Washington. She had wanted to see the White House, but unfortunately, it was closed. She found many changes since her visit of a year ago. It was harder to get into government buildings and many places were closed, she said. Nevertheless, she seemed to think that her stop-over had been worth while.

Then the boy beside me shyly exhibited a pin. I realized it was something to be proud of, but I could not recognize what it stood for and he finally had to explain that it was given to blood donors, and he added: "It would have gone long ago, but I thought it would be a very terrifying experience. I found it quite easy, however, and I won't be at all worried to go again. Besides, they give you a cup of coffee free and when you have been there three times, you get a silver pin."

I told him I had not had time to wait for the cup of coffee, but I was quite able to endorse the fact that it was quite an easy and painless way to do one's bit for the war, and an extra little bit which almost anyone can do in addition to his regular job.

After the Forum, I started to take a street car back, but a taxi with three passengers already in it, hailed me and they asked me if I did not want to ride with them. I accepted gratefully and had a nice talk with my fellow passengers. One girl had been at the Forum, and it is suppose she had kindly suggested they pick me up. I was dropped at the Treasury and walked home.

Our old friend, Mrs. Lewis Thompson, spent the night and this morning. She brought in two very interesting people to discuss employment problems. I feel sure that the work they are doing will be of great value in the future.

Miss Bertha Swindell, of Baltimore, Md., brought me a portrait which she painted of the President, the other day. It was done entirely from photographs, because she only had an opportunity of observing the President one day at lunch. I think it is really a very good portrait.

I find, however, that this question of photographs and portraits is a very difficult one, for what satisfies one person is anathema to another. It is difficult to reproduce all the varying moods of any human being so the reproduction will be to everybody the person they have known.

Various Work of I.O.D.E. On Display at Macdonald

WAR WORK

Edmontonians who would like to view an interesting and complete example of the war work accomplished by the chapters of the I.O.D.E. across Canada are invited to visit the attractive display compiled by the chapters of Edmonton and District and now on display in the rotunda of the Macdonald hotel.

The display tells in short form what the order is doing in the way of war work.

Highly important are the articles of clothing and gifts for bombed civilians, made and sent to the British Isles. On display one can see the children's clothing, sweaters, skirts, underwear and even shoes and boots which are very important. Most of the clothing is made but some is purchased such as the shoes which are obtained in the East at a reduced cost. Quilts and blankets make up a large part of the overseas shipments for civilians. During the year 506,402 articles valued at $248,514.09 have been shipped to relief organizations.

Human interest is centred in the tiny cloth toys and nursery bags made and sent to bombed England. The toys on display include tiny calico dogs and animals made by hand of scraps from the rag bag. Two smart knitted dolls are examples of the ingenuity of the makers who have combined colorful scraps and materials with old knitted socks to make the cuddliest doll a child could ever desire.

The nursery bags are complete with personal items such as towels, combs, soap, pencils, papers, darning wool, shoe laces, tooth paste, pins and bobby pins, thread and needles — all those little items which are so important and for the English people so hard to purchase.

SERVICE MEN

Comforts for service men is one of the important parts of the war work done by the I.O.D.E. On display can be seen the knitted work done for the Navy, Army and Air Force including sweaters, caps, gloves, scarves and socks.

During the year besides the 17,945 ditty bags packed by the order and valued at $75,534.46 the I.O.D.E. has contributed 211,872.37 to the Navy League fund and its members have completed 19,486 comforts for the League.

A total of 23,785 articles of knitted wear and clothing have been sent to British organizations concerned with the welfare of seamen there. On display are examples of the knitted work done for these organizations.

Matchless in value are the fur and leather jackets which the order has been making. These jackets are made from donations made by furriers and by members of the I.O.D.E. During the year 2,202 fur jackets have been made while 4,703 leather jackets have been completed.

For the comfort of the merchant seamen the order is making heavy string mitts. More than 2,035 pairs of these similar to the pairs on display have been completed.

42 TONS OF WOOL

During the year just passed the women of the I.O.D.E. have handled nearly 42 tons of knitting wool. Much of it has been made into knitted garments for civilian and military use but 51,166 pounds of it has been shipped to Britain.

During the year besides the actual hard work done the order has sent 6,732,000 cigarettes valued at $16,961.13. This does not include cigarettes together with pipe tobacco. Funds for this latter are now held until the opportunity is obtained for shipping it to prisoners of war in Hong Kong.

Not a single instance where they could be of service in a country at war has been overlooked by the order. Besides their work for civilians and the armed services, the chapters have maintained canteens and hospitality houses in several districts, have provided clothing, comforts and personal necessities, cigarettes and books, to the British Red Cross for prisoners of war, have made cash and clothing contributions to the Polish relief, have given financial assistance in certain cases of British women evacuees stranded in Canada due to finance regulations, and, last but not least, have raised thousands of dollars in war savings, having sold more than $27,000 worth.

CAMP BOOKS

Many of the newest books, novels and non-fiction, along with new additions of the old standby favorites of all men are among the books provided by the I.O.D.E. to army, navy and airforce canteens in Canada. On display in the Macdonald hotel is a typical camp library which the order sends for recreational reading all over Canada.

There, interested spectators can see just what the I.O.D.E. is doing in this respect. Among the books are such as "Alaska Under Arms" by Patter; "All This And Heaven Too" in a new edition complete with pictures from the moving picture of the same name. Philip Gibb's "The Long Alert," and the "Pied Piper" are other examples.

Besides the many thousands of books and magazines provided for the pleasure of the armed forces the order provides small games, puzzles, playing cards, gramophones and records in great quantities.

During the year 228,644 books, 3,668,786 magazines and 16,410 games have been provided by members and from the national camps library fund.

Girl of 19 Is America's Best Welder

PASCAGOULA, Miss., June 1.—(AP)—Blue-eyed Vera Anderson, 19-year-old girl employee of the local Ingalls shipyard, defeated the best from Henry J. Kaiser's Oregon shipyard to become "woman welding champion of America."

Her opponent was Mrs. Hermina Strmiska, a former housewife who learned welding from her husband.

Miss Anderson's time was 24 minutes, 46 2/5 seconds as she scored 95.55 per cent on quality. Mrs. Strmiska rated 90.50 per cent on quality, finished in 29 minutes, 4 4/5 seconds.

The winner's victory yielded $350 in war bonds, a massive two-foot high silver championship trophy and a trip to Washington this weekend for a visit at the White House with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. The loser received $150 in war bonds.

PREMIER OF ALBERTA AND HIS WIFE

Premier and Mrs. Ernest Manning are shown above in their latest portrait. An accomplished musician, expert as a pianist and talented as a vocalist, Mrs. Manning has endeared herself to a wide circle of friends. She has been of inestimable assistance to her husband in his public career, but at all times has made sure that their home is the truest meaning of the word.

Charming Wife of New Premier Has Wide Interest, Loves Music

WELL able to combine music and family life, and now ready with a smile for the added responsibility as wife of the new premier of Alberta, Mrs. Ernest Manning in an interview said, "I have been busy making a home for my family and keeping up a normal interest in government work. With two small boys to care for, I find little time now to play the piano except for my own enjoyment."

Proud that Alberta has chosen her husband as its new leader, the charming wife of Hon. Mr. Manning, however, mentioned her sorrow that Mr. Manning should have to take office under such sad circumstances as those witnessed by the death of the recent and beloved Premier William Aberhart.

Thirty-one years of age, and born in Saskatoon, Sask., Mrs. Manning, although she is not a Roman Catholic, obtained her education at the Catholic convent of the Sisters of Zion in Prince Albert, and later at the Sacred Heart convent in Calgary. She finished her high school education at Crescent Heights high school, where she was a student at the time Mr. Aberhart was principal of the school.

MARRIED IN CALGARY

Before her marriage, the pretty and popular wife of the new premier was Miss Muriel Aileen Preston, daughter of Mrs. William Preston, formerly of Calgary and now residing in Edmonton. She was her husband at the Prophetic Bible Institute in Calgary. They were married in 1936 at the above mentioned Institute by the Rev. Roy Taylor, M.L.A., for Coleman. The late premier of Alberta, Hon. William Aberhart, gave the bride in marriage.

Mrs. Manning has ever taken an active interest in music. Since she was in the lower grades at the Convent of the Sisters of Zion, she studied music, and loves it greatly. She obtained her degree of the Licentiate of the Royal School of Music from the Toronto Conservatory. Besides playing for the Prophetic Bible Institute in Calgary where she was married, Mrs. Manning was formerly pianist for the "Back to the Bible" club which did work throughout the province.

An active member of the Baptist Church, the wife of the premier is also interested in the Edmonton Fundamental Baptist Church, a new institution still in formation in the city. As yet, organization of the church is foremost in her mind and in the minds of the congregation, and women's groups have not been formed, Mrs. Manning explained.

The Red Cross group formed by Mrs. Aberhart took up some of her time in the past, but she enjoyed the work. The group was made up of wives of government officials and workers, and the women provided articles for the men of two corvettes, one Canadian and the other in the Royal Navy. Garments for the sailors are made by the group, and money to supply them with such necessities as they need is also raised by these women.

Her two small children, William Keith, four, and Ernest Preston who will be one year old on June 10, keep Mrs. Manning busy. When she gets a minute to herself, however, she reads for relaxation. She has no favorites in her choice of reading material, with the exception of literature and music. Books published today are interesting and entertaining, and are written on a variety of different and worthwhile subjects, she thinks.

Members of the "Victory-Ettes"

Awards Made At Convention

Three outstanding presentations were made Tuesday during the sessions of the I.O.D.E. convention in the Macdonald hotel.

Mrs. L. B. Smart, national secretary of the order, was presented with a life membership in the national chapter. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Trick of Regina, and was regent of the Bing of Vimy chapter there for four years. Mrs. Smart has held two positions on the national executive. She was formerly national I.O.D.E. convener of Girl Guides and for the past four years she has held the office of national secretary. She now lives in Toronto.

During her report Mrs. P. G. Mighi, national secretary of Echoes, told of the winning of the "Echoes" trophy, a beautiful silver cup about five inches in diameter, by the province of Manitoba. The cup is awarded to the provincial chapter that shows the largest increase in the sale of subscriptions during the year. Second place was won by Saskatchewan.

SCRAPBOOK CONTEST

Chapters in the order, interested in keeping a complete record of their work and play for the history of the chapter, enter each year in the scrapbook competition, which is sponsored by the committee on publicity, and judged in Toronto by that committee headed by Mrs. H. E. Munro.

First prize this year went to Haliburton Chapter of Windsor Nova Scotia. Second went to the Hugh Cairns, V.C., Chapter of Saskatoon, Sask. Honorable mention went to the Laurentian Chapter of Ottawa.

LIFE OF CHAPTER

Words cannot describe the completeness, the color and the artistic arrangements of the first prize winner. Not a detail has been forgotten. It tells the complete life of the chapter in words, in pictures, and in color. Pictures of the important members of the chapter are novelly done with tiny faces clipped from newspapers and picture book clothes. The book is done in cream color and is fully 200 scrapbook pages in length.

As well as a complete record of the stamp drive, the rummage sales, and the drive for dirty bags, the book contains records of the personal life of the members, wedding parties and the like.

were hostesses to 250 guests on Saturday evening, at a dance held in St. Mary's Auditorium. Guests included members of the armed forces and highlight of the evening were novelty and spotlight dances. Those in charge were Miss Marie McNeil, Miss Jessie Spence, Miss Josephine Sobkow, Miss Francis McNeil, Miss Beryl O'Connor, Miss Kay Smith, Miss Margaret Urquhart, Miss Joan Crossley, Miss Jean Wynne and Miss Jean Campbell.

Mrs. Ruth Bowen is spending a few days in Calgary.

DOBBIN'S COBBLER

RUSH OF NEW BUSINESS for blacksmiths like Fred Piegel lately. "Been selling 'em for years to get a horse," chuckles Fred. "Maybe they'll believe me now." Nothing old fashioned about Fred's breakfast, though. Kellogg's Corn Flakes is his favourite. "Taste mighty good," he says. "The Mrs. likes 'em too. Says they cut take 30 seconds to get ready, and no pots and pans to wash." You'll like Kellogg's Corn Flakes. Get some tomorrow. Two convenient sizes. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

I.O.D.E. Spends $19,100 to Aid With Education

the chapters have continued with their regular work of providing blankets, children's clothing, camp libraries, cigarettes, Polish relief, service centre rooms and the like.

Mrs. John H. Chipman, national convener of the camps library committee, and Mrs. Lawrence Grout, national convener of the wartime hospitality committee, made their reports Tuesday evening.

In concluding the report of the war services committee and sub-committees, Mrs. Angus reported a total value of $935,581.06 in money and kind spent on war work during the year.

Highlights of Wednesday's sessions was the presentation of the national treasurer's financial statement followed by a report of the finance committee Wednesday morning. Mrs. R. H. Brotherhood, national treasurer and convener, reported to the order that the balance of cash and securities on April 15, 1942 was $523,586.30. During the year just ended receipts totalled $307,994.76, expenditures equalled $292,968.13. This surplus of $14,634.06 when added to the balance of last year brings the balance at April 15, 1943 to $538,200.36.

$10,000 IN BONDS

In the report of the committee, Mrs. Brotherhood told the delegates and members that in the 4th victory loan the I.O.D.E. had purchased $10,000 worth of long-term bonds.

"The chapters throughout the order are in a healthy and flourishing condition," reported Mrs. Brotherhood. "In nearly every instance they have substantially increased both their peace-time work and their war work. The provinces of Alberta and Nova Scotia show the greatest increase, having raised for peace-time work over 50 per cent more than last year."

Mrs. Brotherhood commented upon the records of two small chapters, one with a membership of only 23, which has raised almost $5,000 during the year, and the other with a membership of only 19 which has raised $3,000.

At 11 a.m. on Wednesday the delegates and members heard the report of the empire study committee, given by Mrs. Velyien E. Henderson, convener.

EMPIRE STUDY

"Since the purpose of the empire study committee is to promote in the motherland and in the dominions the study of the history of the empire and of current imperial problems, and since a democratic state each citizen must be willing to use his mind in order to preserve a free society, we feel that while there has been a greater interest and enthusiasm shown in it than ever before," said Mrs. Henderson. A great deal of material on reconstruction and rehabilitation after the war has been distributed during the year, and the most important according to Mrs. Henderson is the pamphlet on health, nutrition, family allowances, hospitalization, housing and slum clearance.

Mrs. C. H. Selby, convener of the Navy League committee, in giving the report of that committee spoke of the Navy league work which is done for the Sea Cadets and is a continuance of the peace-time program. She reviewed the work done by each province in this connection.

MANY VISITORS

The report of the distinguished visitors and hospitality committee was given Wednesday morning by Mrs. Irving Hall, convener. Among the outstanding visitors during the year who have been entertained by I.O.D.E. chapters have been Highness Shan Nawaz, M.B.E. who visited in Toronto, and Her Royal Highness Princess Alice as she travelled through Ontario and Quebec. On the event of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's visit to Montreal the chapter there sent her a note of welcome to which she replied. Mrs. Hall reviewed the letters of greeting that have been received during the year and several parties of Dominion note.

The report of th Committee on the Constitution was given by Mrs. F. P. McCurdy, thus concluding Wednesday morning's session.

LONDON, June 2.—Capt. Harold Balfour, parliamentary under-secretary for air, announced in commons today that British and Canadian bombers dropped 12,500 tons of bombs—a new record—on Germany during May.

"We look forward with confidence to being able to increase the supply of bombs being delivered to Germany in due course," Balfour said.

British Typhoon Bombers, escorted by fighters, damaged five small supply ships off the coast of Holland on daylight yesterday, while other fighters attacked railway targets in Northern France. BETH CARTER, WAAC

By LORETTE COOPER

CHAPTER XV

TWO complicate matters, Rick was coming to, and the Jap probably would be in a few minutes.

"Can you fly this plane?" Brit asked Beth.

"Sorry. They made us everything except flyers at Des Moines."

"Then it's up to you to keep the folks in the back seat under control."

Beth took care of Rick first. He was kicking around, and it was obvious that the captives' feet would have to be tied, as well as their hands.

Brit turned the cabin lights on. Beth looked for something she could use to tie ankles together. The bonds which she and Brit had shed were still back in the baggage compartment, which was inhabited in solitary—and finally quiet—inglorioueness by Lita Danson.

Attached to the wall were three parachutes. Beth pulled one of them apart and got a length of strong cord, borrowing Brit's knife to cut the material.

Then she went to the Jap. She reasoned that it would be better to tie him immediately, then struggle with Rick, than to take a chance on having to fight both of them—particularly since the Jap might know some tricks with his feet.

She put the cord around the Jap's ankles and made it secure.

"Now it's your turn," she said to Rick.

Rick Moth eyed her warily.

"Perhaps I should say, 'Now it is your turn, Herr Von Mothe'," Beth said. "Whichever you prefer, it's your turn."

There was a firm set to her jaw.

She watched Rick carefully as she neared his feet. This was going to be a problem. Then she saw its solution almost as soon as she recognized its dangers.

She fastened one end of the cord firmly to the Jap's ankles. Then she formed a running loop in the bight of the cord.

She started toward Rick.

"Watch out," Brit warned.

Brit did not want Beth to be caught in a situation where Rick could use a threat to her safety as a leverage to regain control of the situation.

But there was no need to have any fears.

Beth stepped quickly past Rick, and as he turned to try to trip and kick her viciously, she threw the running loop over his legs and pulled as hard as she could.

She had the advantage, and in three seconds the helpless spy had been caught and dragged so that his ankles were tied to the Jap's.

It was a matter of another few seconds to tie the knot securely. Then Beth rolled the pair away from the centre of the cabin and further lashed them to the side of the plane.

She returned to the front.

"Good work, Beth," Brit said. "You seem equal to anything. I've never seen anyone cooler . . . in the face of danger or possible death."

"A soldier has to face those things," Beth said, smiling.

"Right," Brit answered. "You know, the way I've always looked at it is that when the end comes, it will be just like getting transfer orders. I've been transferred a dozen times in the Army. Sometimes to a better spot, sometimes to a worse. Only almost always to a better one. There's something final about a transfer—it closes the chapter of your life which was spent at the last post." He stopped a moment. Then he resumed. "I've always thought that my final transfer would be that way—final, closing a chapter or maybe even the book, and maybe sending me to a better post."

"That's a good way to look at it, I think," Beth said. As she spoke, she realized that she and Rick had a great many things in kinship as far as their attitudes toward life were concerned.

"Fine time to talk of death," Brit laughed, "when we're staring it in the face." He switched off the cabin lights again so he could get a clearer view of the ocean. "There's the island, but it's a thousand to one we'll never be able to come down on it."

Beth looked down on the island, dark and apparently lifeless. She knew that dark as it was, Brit was right. He knew, as commander of that island, that the tiny spot in the ocean bristled with hidden guns which would blast them down unless they could properly identify themselves. It had been daylight when Lita Danion's American-made Jap plane had first landed, but now it was night.

"You can't get through with the radio?" she asked.

"It was plenty of use to the Jap, but none to me. Wrong frequency."

"There aren't any flares?"

"Wouldn't do us any good. They would bring the guns into action."

Beth remembered that there were two parachutes hanging on the cabin wall.

"Brit," she said, "could you fly over the island lengthwise—you know, so we went across it at its greatest length?"

"Sure," he said. "Why?" As he asked, he swung the plane around so that they were approaching one end of the island.

"Oh, I just wondered."

She dared not tell Brit her plan. So she went back into the cabin and removed one of the parachutes. She got into the harness, and made doubly certain it was securely attached.

"Goodby, Brit," she said. "Stay aloft as long as you can."

He turned toward her. At first he did not understand what she was about to attempt. When he did, it was too late. Lieut Beth Carter of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps had opened the cabin door and plunged free of the plane.

Plan to Close Tech Classes At End of June

fore would be paid for the use of it. The negotiations were carried out with J. H. Ross, provincial supervisor of the services, he stated.

In submitting the recommendation, Mr. Sutherland stated that during the last few years there had been a serious decrease in enrolment at the school, and that there was evidence of a still further decline for the next school year. There was also evidence of a correspondingly large increase in the per-pupil cost of operation. The committee therefore considered the discontinuance of the school justified for the time being.

As president of the Edmonton Teachers' Association, Thomas D. Baker spoke strongly against the move, and stated that the teachers' group in Edmonton would wonder why there should be any discontinuance of technical education in Edmonton. It was, he said, a step that should only be made after careful consideration. If the entire reason was because of a decrease in enrolment, then the board should consider putting the technical school in a smaller building.

FURTHER ARGUMENT

Another representative of the Edmonton teachers, H. C. Clark, president of the Edmonton High School Teachers' Association deplored the move as being a retrograde step. He pointed out that it had taken 20 years to gather together the highly trained and qualified teaching staff at the school and that its closing would mean the loss of this staff.

There would be great difficulty in placing the 14 teachers who would be left without positions by such a move. All teachers looked upon technical education as a fundamental part of high school education and they felt that the members of the board were unable to do this or they would not contemplate such a move.

Mr. Baker told the members of the board that he hoped that it would be possible to continue the instruction given in workshops one and two at the technical school in some of the high schools even if this meant some additional expense.

THE RECOMMENDATION

The recommendation terms and conditions follow in full:

That, commencing from July 1, 1943, and continuing for a period of six months after the cessation of hostilities in the present war against the Axis powers, the Technical School building and equipment be leased to the War Emergency Training Services under the following general terms and conditions:

The War Emergency Training Services to:

Take over the entire Technical School buildings leaving to the School Board, however, the use of the basement for warehouse purposes; and permit to the board free access to the basement from the front entrance and also from the supply shute at the rear.

Provide all of its own teaching and caretaking staff.

Pay all utility service charges such as light, heat, power, water, fuel, etc., including those required for the basement portion of the premises.

Reimburse the board for all insurance charges on the building and contents.

TO PAY TAXES

Pay the local improvement taxes on the property.

Be responsible for the maintenance of the entire building and equipment used by them during the occupancy.

Pay to the board an annual amount as depreciation for use of school equipment. This amount to be 10 per cent of the board's valuation of the equipment left in the building. An inventory would be taken of all of the equipment and contents left in the building, and in this connection, it is suggested that the officials of the board make an inspection of the equipment and remove from the building any which might be available for use elsewhere.

Return the equipment at the end of the occupancy to at least of equal value as at the time of taking over. By this Mr. Ross stated that equipment will be maintained by them and should it be necessary to replace any equipment, such equipment becomes the property of the board at the termination of the occupancy.

PRESENT CONDITION

Return the premises in the present condition, ordinary wear and tear excepted. For this purpose, at the time of taking over there would be a joint inspection made and a record kept of the physical condition of the building, so that both parties would be satisfied as to its condition both at the time of taking over and at the time of relinquishing its use.

The period of occupancy to be from July 1, 1943, and continue until six months after the cessation of hostilities, subject to renewal for a time to be agreed upon.

Be granted the privilege of erecting any other temporary building or buildings on the ground. Mr. Ross stated he had in mind the moving of a portable building presently located at 114 street and Jasper avenue and measuring approximately 24x64 feet.

END OF JUNE

That the operation of the Technical school be discontinued from June 30, 1943, until further notice.

That the placement of the teachers of the Technical school staff elsewhere in the system be referred to the superintendent of schools for consideration and recommendation in accordance with their qualifications and seniority.

That the placement of the caretaking staff elsewhere in the system be referred to the superintendent of plant for consideration and recommendation in accordance with their qualifications and seniority.

M.P. Urges Canada Train South American Airmen

By C. R. BLACKBURN

OTTAWA, June 2.—(CP)—Establishment of an R.C.A.F. college in Canada, similar to the Royal Canadian Naval College at Royal Roads, B.C., and the Royal Military College at Kingston, Ont., was proposed in the House of Commons yesterday by A. R. Adamson (Prog. Con., York West).

He urged upon the government also the advisability of seeking to draw within the activities of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, trainees from South American republics.

He made these suggestions during consideration in committee of the whole, of the $1,129,421,000 R.C.A.F. item in the $5,800,000,000 war appropriation for the current fiscal year.

Consideration of the air force item, an increase of $526,301,000 over the estimated expenditures last year was reached late today.

END ARMY DISCUSSION

Earlier the house completed consideration of Defence Minister Ralston's $1,764,000,000 army share in the total after more than two week's discussion.

Before the house went into committee Agriculture Minister Gardiner told a questioner that the government's feed grain policy this year would be the same as last year and that he would publish an announcement at once to reassure eastern livestock growers.

G. H. Castleden (C.C.F. Yorkton) said it was only right any man in an air crew over enemy territory had qualified himself for a commission. It was "incongruous" that a sergeant pilot in a plane should have commissioned officers under him as crew members. Such a pilot had to salute a member of his crew when the flight was over and he was barred from the officers' mess. Commissions were granted ground service men in Canada, and those on operational duties had the right to commissions.

Prices For New Potatoes Will Be Controlled

OTTAWA, June 2—(CP)—The Prices Board announced last night that, effective June 7, prices of new potatoes must not exceed the lawful ceiling prices for Canada No. 1 grade old potatoes, and, to make the reduced price for new potatoes effective, a subsidy will be paid to protect growers and consumers.

The subsidy will be paid by the prices stability corporation, as directed by the Prices Board, and will continue to be paid until Aug. 31 on new potatoes marketed through prescribed channels. In the case of imported new potatoes, the subsidy will be paid on shipments ordered on or after May 2, and entered for consumption during the period June 3 to July 31, both dates inclusive.

BASIS FOR SUBSIDY

It will represent the amount by which the laid-down cost at distributing point, at carload rate, exceeds the lawful wholesale ceiling for Canada No. 1 grade potatoes, of any variety other than Netted Gem, at that point.

The subsidy will not be paid on imported new potatoes purchased at a price in excess of $2.50 United States currency, f.b.o. the foreign supplier's shipping point, but this restriction will not apply to shipments for which a firm order has been placed by the importer between May 3 and June 2.

In the case of the Canadian-grown product, a domestic subsidy will be paid to any person who buys new potatoes direct from a primary producer or his agent for resale, provided the purchase price does not exceed the following levels:

When shipped on or before July 31, $3.75 per 100 pounds f.o.b. original shipping point; when shipped Aug. 1 to Aug. 15, $3.50 per 100 pounds; when shipped Aug. 16 to Aug. 31, $3 per 100 pounds.

DOMESTIC SUBSIDY

The domestic subsidy paid through the wholesaler will be the difference between his laid-down cost in carload lots at his distributing point and the lawful wholesale ceiling for new potatoes at that point.

When a retailer buys from a primary producer, the subsidy will represent the difference between his laid-down cost at his distributing point and the lawful wholesale ceiling in less than car lots at that point.

The order specifies that laid-down cost is to include the actual cost of transporting the new potatoes from the original shipping point in Canada to the wholesaler's or retailer's distributing point by common carrier, but is not to include express charges.

Transportation charges will not be recognized for potatoes grown within 15 miles of the consuming centre, and the minimum quantity of new potatoes on which subsidy will be paid is 75 pounds.

The board said it had taken action because of the current acute shortage of potatoes which was not likely to be relieved until this year's crop was harvested.

The new potatoes will be under the same ceiling as Canada No. 1 grade of old potatoes.

Getting Around

way of the north aerial route. Wonder how many air mail stamps that letter from Joe to Franklin would require?

It's a funny thing but it seems that Stalin the mysterious, fights shy of a verbal interview but opens right up if questioned by letter. An American reporter named Cassidy should receive all the credit for finding the weak spot in the Russian leader's hitherto impregnable defence against inquiring reporters. Ever since Russia plunged into the war, representatives of big American and British news services and newspapers have been trying to arrange a "press conference" with "Uncle Joseph." But even the starriest stars of this reportorial contingent didn't get within snowballing distance of the Kremlin.

Cassidy put on his thinking cap and decided there was no law, even in Russia, that prevented a person sitting down and writing a letter to the head of the great Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. He wrote an ordinary, polite letter, asking the questions that all of the rest of the Allied world wanted answers to. Right back, with a speed that took the enterprising Cassidy's breath away, came the reply. Just as polite as his American correspondent, the head of the Russian state, replied to each and every question. And there was obviously not the slightest attempt at evasion.

Of course the idea caught on, and why wouldn't it? Others tried it recently, with similar success as that attending the original efforts of Cassidy.

So it seems likely that even President Roosevelt was convinced the Cassidy system is the best to use with Ally Joseph Stalin.

May Distribute Capsules Among Students Here

Health capsules may be distributed among the pupils of Westmount school next fall by the Mountglen Home and School Association, the purchase of the capsules to be made from money raised locally but the distribution to be in no way under the jurisdiction of the school board, it was decided at a meeting of the Edmonton School board management and health committee Tuesday night. Mrs. W. J. Ross was chairman of the meeting.

At a previous meeting a letter was read from officials of the association in which they asked that permission be given them by the school board to distribute the capsules. At that time the members of the board withheld their decision pending further investigation.

It was felt then by members of the board that it would not do for the school board to sponsor the distribution of capsules after having been informed by Dr. G. E. Swallow, medical inspector of schools that the capsules were being made available at greatly reduced prices by the manufacturers simply for the purpose of advertising.

SET ASIDE

This objection Tuesday night was overruled and it was agreed that the association should commence the distribution entirely on its own responsibility.

Further business at the meeting was a recommendation submitted by R. S. Sheppard, superintendent of schools that 21 teachers, appointed in 1941 be transferred to the permanent staff. A further recommendation asked that 47 teachers appointed in 1942 be confirmed on substitute contracts. This was agreed to by the members of the board.
